Wisdom is the knowledge of what we do and do not know.

Plato, The Critias

When the true conditions are realized [in the social sciences], there will evolve a more powerful and realistic theory. We must distinguish carefully between what we think we know and what we really do and can know.

Oscar Morgenstern,

On the Accuracy of Economic Observations, vii
This Page Intentionally Left Blank