Contents

List of Tables viii
List of Figures x
List of Abbreviations xi
Acknowledgements xii

Introduction 1

1. Alternative Views of PAYG as a Social Institution 16
   1.1 Introduction 16
   1.2 Origin of Retirement as a Social Institution 18
   1.3 Private and Social Insurances 25
   1.4 The Insurance Fiction in Practice: The Political Legitimacy of PAYG 27
   1.5 The Insurance Fiction in Theory: Samuelson’s Model 31
   1.6 The Samuelson–Lerner Controversy 36
   1.7 The Post-Samuelson–Lerner Debate 38
   1.8 Moral Social Habits and Social Transfers 42
   1.9 Final Remarks 43

2. Re-engineering PAYG: The Controversy over the Notional Defined Contribution Reforms 52
   2.1 Introduction 52
   2.2 Archetypal Accounting Structures of PAYG 54
   2.3 Notional Defined Contribution Reforms 60
   2.4 Criticism of the NDC scheme 74
   2.5 The Italian NDC Reform 80
   2.6 Final Remarks 84

3. The Conventional Interpretation of a Fully-Funded Scheme and Capital Theory 90
   3.1 Introduction 90
   3.2 Description of a Fully-Fledged FF Scheme 93
   3.3 FF Schemes and Capital Theory 95
   3.4 The Rates of Return of FF and PAYG Schemes 99
   3.5 Equivalent Schemes Vis-à-Vis a Demographic Shock 101
3.6 Alternative Pension Schemes and Savings in an Imperfect Design Context
3.7 Final Remarks
Appendix 3.1: Simple Formal Exposition and Simulations of the Demographic Shocks in a Neoclassical FF Scheme
Appendix 3.2: Economies Indifferent between PAYG and FF Schemes

4. The Transition from PAYG to FF Schemes
4.1 Introduction
4.2 The Transition to Capitalization and the Savings Rate
4.3 Two Kinds of Transition Plans
4.4 Alleged Advantages of Disguised PAYG
4.5 Divergent Interpretations of the Chilean Reform
4.6 Modigliani’s and Feldstein’s Transition Plans
4.7 Pension Funds and the Savings Paradox
4.8 Final Remarks
Appendix 4.1: A World Bank Example of a False Transition to an FF System
Appendix 4.2: On Feldstein’s Transition Plans

5. The Controversy over the Social Security Surplus
5.1 Introduction
5.2 The Social Security Surplus in National Accounts
5.3 Interpretations of the Social Security Trust Fund
5.4 An Appraisal of the Controversy
5.5 Final Remarks
Appendix 5.1: Severance Pay and the Creation of an FF Scheme in Italy

6. The Classical-Keynesian Macroeconomics of Pension Reform in Closed and Open Economies
6.1 Introduction
6.2 The Theory of Effective Demand in the Short and in the Long Period
6.3 Pension Transfers and Demand-Led Growth
6.4 The Impact of the Demographic Shocks in the Light of the Theory of Effective Demand
6.5 A ‘Classical’ Proposal of an FF Reform
6.6 A World of Investment Opportunities: ‘Emerging Markets’ and Endogenous Growth
6.7 A Keynesian View of International Capital Flows
6.8 Final Remarks
7. Classical and Neoclassical Perspectives on the Welfare State and Pensions 227
   7.1 Introduction 227
   7.2 The Classical Theory of Distribution 229
   7.3 Lineages of a Classical Approach to the Welfare State 231
   7.4 Public and Private Provision of Social Wage Goods 235
   7.5 The Classical View of the Incidence of Payroll Taxation 238
   7.6 The Net Distributive Role of the State 239
   7.7 Classical and Neoclassical Approaches 239
   7.8 Dissatisfaction with Welfare Economics 241
   7.9 Classical and Neoclassical Views of Pensions 242
   7.10 The Classical Approach and the Political and Moral Economy Views of Pensions 245
   7.11 Final Remarks 246

8. The Viability of an Ageing Society: A Classical Exploration 252
   8.1 Introduction 252
   8.2 Stylized Demographic Trends 255
   8.3 Ageing and the Labour Market 268
   8.4 Ageing and the Cost of PAYG 282
   8.5 Final Remarks 293
Appendix 8.1: Keynes on Population Decline 301

9. Summary of the Main Arguments 303
   9.1 Introduction 303
   9.2 Alternative Views of PAYG 304
   9.3 ‘Actuarial Anaesthesia’? The NDC Reforms 308
   9.4 Fully-Funded Reforms 312
   9.5 The Economic Impact of Ageing on the Labour Market and on the Sustainability of PAYG 318
   9.6 The Interpretation and the Future of PAYG in the Classical-Keynesian View 325

References 333

Index 350