We are grateful to the 32 contributing authors to this book for sharing their experiences with us in the field of water and economics in different countries across Europe and North America. This book would not have seen the light without their kind collaboration and valuable inputs. Over the years we have conducted many cost–benefit appraisals ourselves and have commented on many others. We have learned a great deal from this process and we thank our colleagues in University College London, the University of East Anglia, the Institute for Environmental Studies (IVM), Vrije Universiteit Amsterdam, RIZA and various consulting companies for the insights they have provided. We hope this rich experience shows up in the chapters in this volume so that others can benefit in the way we have done.

Finally, we would like to thank Dymphna Evans of Edward Elgar for her patience in waiting for the manuscript and for the professional style of Edward Elgar Publishing. We are privileged to be part of the impressive list of environmental economics titles they produce.

The publishers wish to thank the following who have kindly given permission for the use of copyright material.

World Bank for the article: ‘Measuring Economic Benefits for Water Investments and Policies’ with Robert Young, World Bank Technical Report, 338, 1996, 8–26.

Every effort has been made to trace all the copyright holders but if any have been inadvertently overlooked the publishers will be pleased to make the necessary arrangements at the first opportunity.
