Contributors

Pamela Barnes is Principal Lecturer and Jean Monnet ad personam Chair in European Political Integration in the Department of Law, at the University of Lincoln, UK. Her current research interests include the implementation of environmental policy in the new member states, the regional impact of sustainable development policy, nuclear energy policy development in the enlarged EU and EU decision making in an increasingly diverse EU. She has co-authored several books including Environmental Policy in the EU with I.G. Barnes, published by Edward Elgar Publishing (hb 1999, pb 2000), and written articles on: enlargement and EU environmental policy; EU environmental management and audit legislation; the environmental impact of CAP reforms; the development of the EU’s nuclear energy strategy, EU employment strategy, and EU institutional developments and decision making.

Dr Theresa Callan is Senior Lecturer in International Politics at the University of Portsmouth, UK. Her current research interests include the study of state and nation building in post-conflict societies and security after conflict. She has researched the decommissioning of armaments in the Balkans and Northern Ireland and is currently publishing the findings. Her recent publications include, with Fergus Carr, Managing Conflict in the New Europe: the Role of International Institutions (Palgrave, 2002).

Fergus Carr is Head of the School of Social, Historical and Literary Studies and Principal Lecturer in International Politics at the University of Portsmouth, UK. His research interests include the role of international institutions in the management of conflict, contemporary security studies and the external role of the European Union. He has published on NATO, public policy in Europe and British foreign policy. His recent publications include, with Theresa Callan, Managing Conflict in the New Europe: the Role of International Institutions (Palgrave, 2002).

Petr Drulák is Director of the Institute of International Relations in Prague. He has published on the theory of international relations, European integration and EU enlargement in a number of Czech and international publications including the Journal of International Relations...

Dr Paul Flenley is Principal Lecturer in Politics and Coordinator of European Studies Masters programmes at the University of Portsmouth, UK. His current research interests are Russia–EU/NATO relations, Russian national identity, and the early development of the Soviet state. He is an editor of the Journal of Contemporary European Studies and has edited several special issues, most recently in April 2005. He has published in the areas of Russian nationalism, foreign policy, the media and the Russian Revolution. Recent publications include: ‘Nationalism and the National Question in the Soviet Union: Problems of Interpretation’, History Teaching Review Yearbook, 16, 2002, pp. 15–21; ‘NATO and the Russian Federation: The Founding Act on Mutual Relations’, with F. Carr, in the Journal of Communist Studies and Transition Politics, 15, 1999, pp. 88–110; and ‘Russia and the EU: A Pragmatic and Contradictory Relationship’, Perspectives on European Politics and Society, 6 (3), 2005.

Wyn Grant is Professor of Politics at the University of Warwick, UK. He has published extensively in the fields of political economy and comparative public policy. His most recent books are (with William Coleman and Tim Josling) Agriculture in the New Global Economy (Edward Elgar, 2004) and (co-edited with Dominic Kelly) The Politics of International Trade in the Twenty-First Century (Palgrave, 2005).

Elspeth Guild is Professor of European Migration Law at the Raboud University of Nijmegen, The Netherlands and partner at the London law firm Kingsley Napley. She has researched widely on immigration and asylum in EU law; her most recent book is Legal Elements of European Identity: EU Citizenship and Migration Law (Kluwer Law International, The Hague, 2004). She is coordinating, for her university, a European Union Framework Six Project, CHALLENGE, which brings together 23 universities and institutes across the EU to examine the relationship of liberty and security after 11 September 2001 and 11 March 2004.

Dr Barbara Lippert is Deputy Director of the Institut für Europäische Politik, Berlin, managing editor of the quarterly journal Integration and Lecturer at Humboldt University, Berlin. Recent publications include: The Pressure of Europeanization. From post-communist state administrations to normal players in the EU system (co-author; Nomos Verlag, Baden-Baden, 2005); Bilanz und Folgeprobleme der EU-Erweiterung (editor; Nomos Verlag, Baden-Baden, 2004); *European Politics of the Red-Green

Mike Mannin is the Jean Monnet Chair in European Integration at Liverpool John Moores University, UK and is currently Loewenstein Research Fellow in Political Science at Amherst College. He has published in the fields of European Union, enlargement and monetary, and regional policy. He is presently researching the impact of EU membership on the structure and processes of British government and politics.

Andrew Massey is Professor of Government in the School of Social Historical and Literary Studies, University of Portsmouth, UK. His research interests are in the fields of public policy and public administration, with a special emphasis on reform and modernization. He has worked for several British government departments and is currently a member of a specialist panel on Global Governance for the International Institute for Administrative Sciences, Brussels. His recent publications include Public Management and Modernization in Britain with Robert Pyper (Palgrave, 2005); and Decentralizing the Civil Service: from unitary state to differentiated polity in the United Kingdom, with P. Carmichael, J. McMillan and R.A.W. Rhodes (Open University Press, 2003).

Dr Paul McVeigh is Senior Lecturer in International (Economic) Relations at the University of Portsmouth, UK. His publications include: ‘Is Spain still different? The rise of neo-liberalism in Democratic Spain’, in G. Menz, P. Cerny and S. Soederberg (eds), Internalizing Globalization: the rise of Neo-Liberalism and the Decline of National Varieties of Capitalism (Palgrave, 2006); ‘Introduction’ in D. Coates (ed.), Economic and industrial performance and policy in Europe since the oil crisis (Cheltenham, Edward Elgar, 1995); and ‘Globalization and national economic strategy: the case of Spain’, Journal of European Area Studies, 7 (1), 1999, pp. 73–90. His research interests include: globalization and neo-liberalism; convergence and divergence of national capitalisms; European economic integration; economic development; and global governance.

Graham Moon is Professor of Health Services Research at the University of Portsmouth, UK. He is a health geographer with current research interests in the geographies of health-related behaviour, primary health care and mental... health. He has published five books and over 80 papers in leading journals and collections supported by research funding from the ESRC, the NHS and commercial sources. He is Founding Editor of the journal Health and Place and former Chair of the RGS–IBG Geography of Health Research Group. His recent publications include, with Nancy North, Policy and Place: General Medical Practice in the UK, Basingstoke, Macmillan, 2000).

Dr Paul Norman is a member of the Centre for European and International Studies Research, and the Postgraduate Programme Area Leader of the Institute of Criminal Justice Studies, University of Portsmouth, UK. His recent publications include: ‘The United Nations and counter-terrorism after September 11: towards an assessment of the impact and prospects of counter-terror “spill-over” into international criminal justice cooperation’, Proceedings of the British Society of Criminology Conference 2004, University of Portsmouth; and ‘European Policing Strategies and Transnational Crime’, in J. Sheptycki and A. Wardak (eds), Transnational and Comparative Criminology (Glasshouse Press, 1995). His current research interests include EU external relations and counter-terrorism after 11 September; terrorism, international security and the United Nations; and African regional criminal justice/counter-terrorism.

Frank Schimmelfennig is Professor of European Politics at the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology, Zürich. He is the author of The EU, NATO and the Integration of Europe: Rules and Rhetoric (Cambridge University Press, 2003) and co-editor with Ulrich Sedelmeier of The Europeanization of Central and Eastern Europe (Cornell University Press, 2005) and The Politics of EU Enlargement. Theoretical Approaches (Routledge, 2005). His work on the international politics and integration of Europe has appeared, inter alia, in Comparative Political Studies, the European Journal of International Relations, International Organization, the Journal of Common Market Studies, and the Journal of European Public Policy.