Acknowledgements

The editors wish to thank the Economic and Social Research Council (ESRC award R45126511) for funding the series on which this collection is based, all those who presented and contributed to the discussions in the six seminars and the authors who have contributed their text with special thanks to those writing in their second language. We all wish to thank Ralph Kinnear for ‘English proofing’ the final text; Hazel Johnstone, Gender Institute, London School of Economics for her administrative support with the seminar series and with the preparation of the final typescript; Claudia Soares, University of Urbino for help collating references, Silvia Posocco for designing and managing the web page that accompanied the seminar series and, finally, special thanks to Catherine Elgar for her support and encouragement to produce this collection.

We are grateful to Lawrence Erlbaum Associates, New Jersey for granting us permission to reprint Harriet Presser’s chapter which originally appeared as ‘Employment in a 24/7 Economy: Challenges for the Family’ in Ann C. Crouter and Alan Booth (eds) Work–Family Challenges for Low-Income Parents and Their Children. Duke University Press granted permission to print Melissa Fisher’s chapter, which appears as ‘Navigating Wall Street Women’s Gendered Networks in the New Economy’ in Frontiers of Capital: Ethnographic Reflections on the New Economy (copyright 2006, Duke University Press, all rights reserved). Every effort has been made to contact copyright holders for their permission to reprint materials in this book. The publishers would be grateful to hear from any copyright holder who is not here acknowledged and will undertake to rectify any errors or omissions in future editions of this book.
