Contributors

D. Ray Bagby is the Robert M. and Louise Rogers Chair of Entrepreneurship in the Hankamer School of Business, Baylor University, USA. In addition to his own publications and presentations of papers, he served as executive editor of the American Journal of Small Business (AJSB) from 1984 to 1988, and continued in that role when it was converted to Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice (ET&P). Ray has been active in the U.S. Association for Small Business and Entrepreneurship, the Entrepreneurship Division of the Academy of Management, the Southern Management Association and the International Council for Small Business.

Telma Barbosa is Lecturer and Researcher of Strategy, Entrepreneurship and SME at the Universidade Federal de Vicsosa, one of the leading Brazilian Federal Universities. She is Visiting Research Fellow of Teesside University Business School, where she has developed research work together with Professor Ted Fuller of the Centre for Entrepreneurship and Small Business Development. She achieved her PhD degree at Durham University with a thesis on SME competitive strategy. Her previous research projects have focused on entrepreneurship development and SME start-up factors, and successful SMEs’ marketing, competitive strategies and innovation strategies. Her current research interests are SME internationalisation processes and strategies and the role of network and relationship in SME internationalisation and strategic decision making.

Jonathan Calof is an Associate Professor at the School of Management, University of Ottawa, Canada. He focuses his research on international competitive intelligence and international decision making. He is also a co-director of INTRAN (Intelligence Teaching and Research Academic Network) and a board member for CASIS (Canadian Association for Security and Intelligence Studies).

Leo Paul Dana is Senior Advisor to the World Association for Small and Medium Enterprises, and tenured at the University of Canterbury, New Zealand. He also holds the title of Adjunct Professor at the University of Regina, in Canada. He was formerly Deputy Director of the International Business MBA Programme at Singapore’s Nanyang Business School. He also served on the faculties of McGill University, Canada and INSEAD, France. He holds BA and MBA degrees from McGill University, and a PhD from the Ecole des Hautes Etudes Commerciales, Canada. He has an extensive research background studying entrepreneurship in different cultures and is the author of a number of books and articles on the subject. He is the founder of the Journal of International Entrepreneurship. He has produced 12 books, including the bestseller Entrepreneurship in Pacific Asia: Past, Present and Future (World Scientific, 1999), and over 100 journal articles.

Paul Dishman is an Associate Professor of Business Management at the Marriott School of Management at Brigham Young University in Provo, Utah, USA. He holds an MBA in marketing and a PhD in marketing research. He served as president of the Society of Competitive Intelligence Professional (SCIP) Board of Directors in 2003 as well as serving as vice president conferences and education, annual conference chair, and co-chair of the first Academic Conference on Competitive Intelligence.

Hamid Etemad is a Professor of Marketing and International Business at the Desautels Faculty of Management, McGill University, Canada. He received PhD, MSc and MBA degrees from the University of California at Berkeley as well as an M Eng from the University of Tehran. He has published widely: he has edited four book volumes and guest-edited numerous scholarly journal issues, including Canadian Journal of Administrative Sciences, Journal of International Entrepreneurship, Global Focus, Journal of International Entrepreneurship, Journal of International Management, Journal of International Marketing, Management International Review and Small Business Economics, among others. He is the series editor of the McGill International Entrepreneurship Series published by Edward Elgar Publishing. He is the Past President of the Administrative Sciences Association of Canada and current Director of the Business and Management Research Center at McGill University. He is also the Convener of the McGill International Entrepreneurship Conference Series.

Ted Fuller is Professor of Entrepreneurship and Strategic Foresight at Teesside Business School, University of Teesside, UK. His research has included anticipatory management, new technology and enterprise sustainability. He is a member of the international advisory board of Futures: Journal of Policy, Planning and Future Studies. He has published extensively on small and medium enterprises and entrepreneurship focusing on the creation of better futures for enterprises. Publications include refereed papers in International Small Business Journal, Journal of Entrepreneurship and Regional Development, Futures Journal and Emergence. Ted is also currently vice-president, trustee and member of the Board of Directors of the Institute of Small Business and Entrepreneurship in the UK.

Alan Griffiths is Reader in Economics at the Ashcroft International Business School, Anglia Ruskin University, Cambridge, UK. He is Fellow of the Japan Foundation and previously Research Officer at the Research Institute for the National Economy (Kokumin Keizai Kenkyu Kyokai), Tokyo, as well as Visiting Professor of Economics at Yokohama National University, Japan. Publications include articles on the applied economics of the UK and Japan in the areas of labour, management, trade and SMEs. Books published or edited include those dealing with applied economics, intermediate microeconomics, economic for business and management, and the EU.

Keith Herrmann is Director of Programmes for the Small Enterprise Development team within the Executive Education and Enterprise Department at Durham Business School, UK. He has experience in economic policy research (HM Treasury, Department for Trade and Industry, Department for Education and Skills), the impact of regulation on SMEs, and small business development in South Africa and the United Kingdom, and has been extensively involved in the design, assessment and development of business development programmes in Kenya, Uganda, Tanzania, South Africa and Malawi funded by the UK Department for International Development. He has project experience in developing sector development strategies and researching appropriate business start-up support for university graduates. He has extensive research experience in SME development, and has reviewed business support internationally to develop an evidence base to inform SME policy in the UK (Small Business Service, DTI). Beyond this Keith has experience in business development including designing and delivering ‘growth and change’ programmes for SME owner-managers, and developing mechanisms to support private sector development. Keith is also currently involved in teaching and mentoring students on the BA in Business degree, the MBA programme and the Biological Sciences and Computer Sciences entrepreneurship electives at the University of Durham.

Ronald Klingebiel is researching in the field of new strategic directions at the Judge Business School, University of Cambridge, UK. He has held lecturing appointments in corporate strategy at the Berlin School of Economics, Germany, and the Ashcroft International Business School, Anglia Ruskin University, Cambridge, UK. Ronald has published in the field of real options planning as a capability for competitive advantage as well as aspects of electronic toll collection. He has engaged in strategic consultancies with Procter and Gamble, DaimlerChrysler and A.T. Kearney. He is academic director of the Centre for Strategic Studies, Anglia Ruskin University, and acts in a strategic advisory capacity for CapGemini.

Tim Mazzarol is Director of the Centre for Entrepreneurial Management and Innovation (CEMI) and an Associate Professor of Entrepreneurship and Strategy at the Graduate School of Management at the University of Western Australia. He has 15 years experience of working with small entrepreneurial firms as well as large corporations and government agencies. This has included strategic management, marketing and support for commercialisation. His research into small business management has been published internationally. He holds a PhD in Management and an MBA with distinction from Curtin University of Technology, and a Bachelor of Arts with Honors from Murdoch University, Western Australia.

Jay Mitra is the Founding Professor of Business Enterprise and Innovation and Director of the Centre for Entrepreneurship Research at the University of Essex, Southend, UK.
He is also the Director of the Scientific Committee on Entrepreneurship for the OECD (Organization for Economic Co-operation and Development) and its LEED (Local Economic and Employment) Programme in Paris, France and in Trento, Italy. He has held visiting professorships at the Universities of Bologna and Bari, Italy and Kuopio, Finland and is currently also a visiting research fellow at the Beijing University of Foreign Studies in China. He has published widely on entrepreneurship, innovation, small firm growth and internationalisation, and technology and knowledge transfer between universities and small firms. He has over 20 years of experience in the field, gained while working for a firm of consultants and accountants, in local government, as head of an innovation centre, as an academic, and through two new business ventures of his own in London.

Terry Mughan is Professor of International Management and Director of Consulting and Development at the Centre for International Business, Ashcroft International Business School, Anglia Ruskin University, Cambridge, UK. His research interests have recently focused on business internationalisation strategies, including a study of 1200 companies in the East of England. This project involved data gathering, analysis and recommendations made to the regional authorities and yielded numerous published articles and papers. He has acted as a consultant to UK Trade and Investment and has played a key role in the formulation of the revised International Business Strategy for the region. His is currently Director of the H.I.G.H.E.R. project, a £180 000 study of international mid-scale businesses. Terry has extensive experience as a consultant and trainer to companies of all sizes, in the areas of intercultural management, exporting and strategic transformation. He speaks French and German fluently.

Leslie E. (Les) Palich is Associate Professor of Management and Entrepreneurship and the Ben H. Williams Professor of Entrepreneurship at Baylor University, USA, where he is associate director of the entrepreneurship programme and teaches graduate and undergraduate courses in international management. He holds a PhD and an MBA from Arizona State University and a BA from Manhattan Christian College, USA. With more than three dozen publications to his credit, his research has appeared in Strategic Management of Management, Academy of Management Review, Journal of International Business and Journal of Organizational Behaviour, among others. His research interests focus on international entrepreneurship, entrepreneurial risk taking behaviour, and the impact of cor-rupation on entrepreneurial activity. He is director of the Baylor in Cuba program and often teaches there and in Europe, as well as directing the Baylor International Technology Entrepreneurship program at the University of Maastricht in the Netherlands.

Stuart Smith is Director of Consultancy at the Wood Holmes Group, Newcastle upon Tyne, United Kingdom. He is an experienced futurist, having carried out a range of projects for FTSE100 and large public sector bodies alike. Having originally trained as an environmental scientist at Imperial College London, he moved into the ICT sector at the height of the dot.com boom and worked for a major telecoms company on futures thinking and the impact of technology on organisational design. He has published widely and has a particular interest in complexity theory, knowledge sharing and social networks.

Stuart Wall is Professor of Business and Economics at the Ashcroft International Business School, Anglia Ruskin University, Cambridge, UK and is a former consultant to the OECD Directorate for Science, Technology and Industry. He has also acted as consultant to British Telecom, and to other telecommunications and media-related multi-nationals. He has published extensively in a wide range of international business and management areas, including the impacts of information technologies on cross-border flows of both products and foreign direct investment. Together with Alan Griffiths, he has published some of the UK’s best-selling undergraduate and postgraduate texts in applied economics.

Richard Wright was the founding Director of International Business Studies in the Faculty of Management at McGill University, Canada. He currently holds the E. Claiborne Robins Distinguished University Chair in the Robins School of Business, University of Richmond, USA. His publications include eleven books and research monographs and numerous journal articles. A co-founder of the annual McGill Conferences on International Entrepreneurship, he is also president of an international management consulting and training firm specialising in Asia and the Pacific. His current research interests focus on the new opportunities and challenges facing small firms in the globalising economy, on which he has edited several books and special journal issues.

Carsten Zimmermann is researching into the interlocking areas of strategy, internationalisation and innovation, in which he has published a series of journal articles and monograph chapters on the resource- and activity-based views of collaboration. Carsten has studied at the Berlin School of Economics, Germany; the Ashcroft International Business School, Anglia Ruskin University, and the Judge Business School, University of Cambridge, UK; and at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology (M.I.T.) in the USA. Carsten has been actively involved in consultancy activities involving the high-technology and telecommunications sectors for KPMG Consulting, Andersen Consulting (Accenture) and A.T. Kearney, amongst others.