

Tables

1.1	Linkages between internal management functions and markets for business services	7
A.1.1	Average annual real growth in KIBS, services and manufacturing production 1991–2001	24
A.1.2	Production in KIBS, manufacturing and services as a share of total GDP 1991–2001	25
2.1	Goals of collaboration	34
2.2	Reasons for an MA vs. an alliance	39
2.3	Instruments of governance and their drawbacks	45
3.1	Sources of funds for R&D undertaken in UK firms	62
4.1	IT outsourcing cases in Germany and the UK	94
4.2	Cases where IT outsourcing was accompanied by significant change in the client's production system	99
4.3	The 'retained IT organization' in client organizations	103
4.4	Examples of conflicts between client and supplier organizations	106
A.4.1	Sources of interview data	119
5.1	US overnight air market shares	130
5.2	Propositions and case-study findings	140
6.1	Sources of interview data
	(a) General interviews at the four computer services firms	161
	(b) Interviews for 13 IT outsourcing contracts	161
6.2	The Western European IT outsourcing market, 2000–02 with forecast for 2003–06	165
6.3	'Captive outsourcing' among top computer services firms in the German IT outsourcing market, 2002	167
6.4	Staff transfer and organizational form in 13 contracts	169
6.5	Comparing features of client expertise in 13 contracts	173
7.1	Largest IT service providers in West Europe, 1991	188
7.2	Largest IT service providers in West Europe, 1997	188
7.3	SAP modules	191
8.1	Institutional framework architectures in Germany and the UK	215
8.2	Variable names, descriptions and data sources	222
8.3	Composition of the Standardized Software Index (SSI)	224

8.4	Structural variables used and their expected values	227
8.5	Standardized cluster means (structural variables)	228
8.6	National distribution by cluster	228
8.7	Predicted institutional values and stylized cluster results	229