Contributors

Julia Black is a Reader in Law and a member of the ESRC Centre for Analysis of Risk and Regulation at the London School of Economics. She has published widely in the area of regulatory theory, regulatory techniques and in the specific areas of financial services regulation and the regulation of gene technology.

Christopher Hood is Gladstone Professor of Government at All Souls College, Oxford and a member of the ESRC Centre for Analysis of Risk and Regulation at the London School of Economics. He has published widely on changing doctrines in public administration, regulation inside government and on risk regulation.

Robert P. Kaye is a Research Officer at the ESRC Centre for Analysis of Risk and Regulation at the London School of Economics. His main fields of expertise are in the ethics regulation of politics and the regulation of the professions.

Martin Lodge is Lecturer in Political Science and Public Policy in the Department of Government and a member of the ESRC Centre for Analysis of Risk and Regulation at the London School of Economics. He has published on comparative regulatory regimes, in particular railway regulation, and comparative public administration.

Colin Scott is a Reader in Law and a member of the ESRC Centre for Analysis of Risk and Regulation at the London School of Economics. His main fields of expertise are in governance and regulatory theory, regulation of government, communications regulation and consumer protection.

Mark Thatcher is a Reader in Public Administration and Public Policy in the Department of Government and a member of the ESRC Centre for Analysis of Risk and Regulation at the London School of Economics. His research lies in comparative regulation and public policy, particularly telecommunications, utilities and independent regulatory agencies in the UK, France, Germany and Italy and at the EU level.