Figures

1.1 Andrews’s concept of corporate strategy 9
2.1 Hatch and Schultz's model of the relationship between organizational culture, identity and image 24
3.1 Current organizational identity within the strategy context 30
3.2 From individually perceived organizational identities to a collectively ‘shared’ organizational identity 31
3.3 Hayashi’s cyclical time concept 42
3.4 Desired (future) organizational identity within the strategy context 44
3.5 Possible gaps and inconsistencies in a dynamic framework of organizational identity within the strategy context 48
4.1 The traditional paradigm of problem solving in organizations and the paradigm of appreciative inquiry 61
4.2 Finke's four general, conceptual domains into which new ideas can be classified 74
4.3 Identity gap and probability of change acceptance 75
5.1 Basic design of strategy making process and its five core processes 85
5.2 Basic design of strategy making process and its relations to elements of the framework of desired organizational identity within the strategy context 86
6.1 The aggregated shared desired organizational identity of JOURNAL 110
6.2 Relationship diagram of a future scenario from the retailer’s perspective 126
6.3 Relationship diagram of a future scenario from the manufacturer’s perspective 127
6.4 Industry and socio-cultural trends in the worlds of the customer and common problems in trend monitoring and analysis 131
6.5 Abell's definition of a market 149
6.6 Basic strategic value matrix of JOURNAL 153
6.7 Strategic value matrix of JOURNAL (retailers) in a competitive environment 155
6.8 Basic strategic value matrix 157