

Contributors

Lorenzo Allio has previously worked as a Policy Analyst at the European Policy Centre (Brussels), where he was responsible for the EPC Better Regulation Programme from 2002 to 2006. Lorenzo Allio is also a PhD candidate at King's College London, where he writes on the emergence of Better Regulation in the European Union. He obtained his MA diploma in European Political and Administrative Studies at the College of Europe (Bruges), after graduating in Contemporary History and Economics at the University of Basel, Switzerland.

Cesar Cordova Novion is a Director of Jacobs and Associates, a consulting firm working on regulatory reform. He was Deputy Director of the OECD Programme on Regulatory Reform until 2003, where he directed the country review programme and carried out numerous reviews of RIA practices. Previously, he was Director of the Mexican Regulatory Reform Office.

Fabrizio De Francesco is an ESRC Research Fellow at the Centre for Regulatory Governance and doctoral candidate in the Department of Politics at the University of Exeter.

Rex Deighton-Smith is an independent public policy consultant, specializing in regulatory governance, regulatory impact assessment and competition policy. He formerly worked on the OECD's Programme on Regulatory Management and Reform and has also worked as the Director of the office of Regulation Reform in the Victorian State government, Australia.

Ed Humpherson heads the regulation practice at the National Audit Office, UK. He is responsible for leading the NAO's Better Regulation work, encompassing regulatory impact assessment and the costs of regulation. He also leads the NAO's assessments of independent regulators such as Ofcom, Ofgem and the Financial Services Authority.

Colin Jacobs has worked in the public sector for over 20 years and has a doctorate in public administration. Dr Jacobs heads the international team at the UK Evaluation Society and is a Chartered Fellow at the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development (CIPD). He worked from 2004 to 2005 at the Regulatory Impact Assessment (RIA) Unit at the UK's Cabinet Office, to review monitoring and evaluation (M&E) systems and strengthen evidence-based impact assessments. Dr Jacobs is an Associate at the Institute of Development Policy and Management, University of Manchester, UK.

Scott H. Jacobs is a leading international expert on regulatory reform. He directed the Programme on Regulatory Reform at the OECD from 1995 to 2001. From 2001, he has been Managing Director of Jacobs and Associates, a consulting firm working on regulatory reform in over 70 countries.

Colin Kirkpatrick is Hallsworth Professor of Development Economics and Director of the Impact Assessment Research Centre at the Institute for Development Policy and Management, School of Environment and Development, University of Manchester, UK. He is also Co-director of the Regulation Research Programme at the Centre on Regulation and Competition, University of Manchester.

Malathy Knight-John is a Research Fellow and Head of Industry, Public Enterprise Reform and Regulatory Policy Research at the Institute of Policy Studies, Colombo, Sri Lanka. She is currently reading for a PhD in Development Policy and Management at the University of Manchester, UK.

Peter Ladegaard is a Senior Investment Policy Officer at the Investment Climate Department of the World Bank Group. Before joining the World Bank Group in April 2005, Peter Ladegaard worked for the OECD's Regulatory Reform Programme. Peter Ladegaard specializes in policy advice and technical assistance on regulatory management and reform.

David Parker is Research Professor in Privatisation and Regulation and Director of the Centre for Competition and Regulation Research at the Cranfield School of Management, Cranfield University, UK. He is also Co-director of Regulation Research at the Centre on Regulation and Competition at the University of Manchester and a member of the UK Competition Commission.

Claudio M. Radaelli is Professor of Political Science and Jean Monnet Chair at the University of Exeter, UK, and Director of the Centre for Regulatory Governance.

Margo Thomas is FIAS/World Bank Group Regional Program Coordinator and Business Enabling Environment Manager for South East Europe, responsible for providing advice and technical assistance on business environment policy and regulatory reform. In 2004–5 Margo Thomas was a visiting researcher at the University of Manchester's Centre on Regulation and Competition.

Darren Welch is Deputy Director at DAI Europe Ltd, responsible for work on policy and regulatory reform. He has advised on these issues in Africa, Asia and Europe. Darren Welch is a former member of the Cabinet Office of the UK where he was Head of the Better Regulation Unit's EU and International Branch.