

Acknowledgements

---

We are indebted to several individuals in the endeavor of putting this book together. We thank the Vice-president and the specialized staff at the financial services institution at which we applied the Appreciative Sharing of Knowledge (ASK) method for their support in trying out the new approach. We also thank the graduates of the George Mason University Organizational Learning program who collected the data for three of the case studies. Since we cannot reveal the names of those organizations, the identity of the graduates is not mentioned. We are grateful to the following graduates who conducted the MARAD project and gave us permission to use the study and their names: Raymond Pagliarini, Anita Murphy, Dan Eisen, Julia Nissely, and Ursula Koerner. We are particularly thankful to Raymond Pagliarini who secured permission to conduct the project at MARAD.

Appreciative Sharing of Knowledge: Leveraging Knowledge Management for Strategic Change (2005), a practitioner version describing step-by-step ASK methodology was written by Tojo Thatchenkery, co-author of this book, and published by Taos Institute. We thank Taos Institute Publications for letting us use material from the book where appropriate. All such references and citations are used with the permission of the copyright holder and publisher. We have tried to ensure that necessary credits are given to those individuals and organizations. If we have made an error, please let us know and we will make appropriate acknowledgement in future editions of this book.

We are also grateful to several colleagues who supported us in many ways, including David Barry, Kenneth Gergen, David Cooperrider, Dawn Dole, Kingsley Haynes, Roger Stough, William Rifkin, and Ram Tenkasi. We thank Alan Sturmer, Senior Acquisitions Editor at Edward Elgar Publishing for enthusiastically commissioning our book, Tara Gorvine and Julie Leppard for early support, Katy Wight, Promotions Manager for her publicity efforts, and David Vince, Desk Editor for his excellent and prompt production support. Without their active assistance and commitment this project would not have been possible.

Last, but not the least, we are indebted to our families – Tessy, Sruthi, Manjit, Mina, and Tanvir for their love, understanding, and support.

*Tojo Thatchenkery,
Dilpreet Chowdhry*