Notes on the Contributors

ERNEST ARYEETEEY is Director of the Institute of Statistical, Social and Economic Research at the University of Ghana, Legon. His research focuses on the economics of development, with a particular emphasis on the role of institutions. He holds a doctorate in economics from the University of Dortmund, Germany.

JEAN-CLAUDE BERTHÉLEMY is Professor of Economics at the Sorbonne, Paris, where he obtained his doctorate. He is also an associate member of the French Academy of Social Sciences, Vice-chair of the European Development Research Network and resource person for the African Economic Research Consortium. He previously was a senior staff member of the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development and is a consultant for various international organizations.

CARLOS CASACUBERTA holds an M.Sc. in economics from the London School of Economics and Political Science. He is a researcher at the Department of Economics, School of Social Sciences, Universidad de la República, Uruguay.

SATISH CHAND is director of the Pacific Policy Project and Associate Professor in Economics at the Australian National University. He has a Ph.D. from the Australian National University and has published on international trade, aid and economic growth. Being from Fiji, his geographic interests are in the island states of the South Pacific.

JAMES K. CHIN is a Research Fellow at the Center for Asian Studies at the University of Hong Kong. He has published more than 40 journal articles and book chapters on Chinese international migration and diaspora, Sino-Southeast Asian relations and the maritime history of Asia.

RICHARD N. COOPER is the Maurits C. Boas Professor of International Economics at Harvard University. His primary fields of interest include both international trade and international monetary economics, international environmental and energy issues.

NATALIA DINELLO has earned doctoral degrees from the University of Pittsburgh and the Soviet Academy of Science. As Principal Political Scientist at the Secretariat of the Global Development Network, she designs and implements strategies and programs for building research capacity in developing and transition economies. She also has an extensive publication record for her own research.

CHANTAL DUPASQUIER holds a master's degree in economics from the Université du Québec and is currently officer-in-charge of the Policy Planning and Coordination Section in the Office of Strategic Planning and Programme Management, United Nations Economic Commission for Africa (UNECA) in Addis Ababa. Prior to joining UNECA she was an assistant chief at the Bank of Canada. She has also been a monetary operations adviser to the IMF and has written papers on a broad range of issues related to monetary policy as well as economic and social development.

GABRIELA FACHOLA holds an M.Sc. in economics from the School of Social Sciences, Universidad de la República, Uruguay, where she is affiliated as a full-time instructor and researcher.

NÉSTOR GANDELMAN is director of the Department of Economics at Universidad ORT Uruguay. He holds a doctorate in economics from the University of Rochester. His research has focused primarily on applied industrial organization and labor economics.

ADAMA KONSEIGA joined the African Population and Research Center in August 2005 as a post-doctoral fellow. He received a Ph.D. in Economics through a unique collaboration between the University of Bonn in Germany and the University of Auvergne in France. He has previously worked at the Ministry of Economic Development and Finance as a Project Manager assigned to the European Development Fund Projects for Burkina Faso. Konseiga won the 2005 Global Development Medal for Outstanding Research on Development.

PATRICK N. OSAKWE holds a doctorate in economics from Queen's University, Canada, and is currently the officer-in-charge of the Financing Development Section in the Trade, Finance and Economic Development Division of the U.N. Economic Commission for Africa (UNECA) in Addis Ababa. Before joining UNECA, he was a senior analyst with the Bank of Canada. He has conducted extensive research in international and development economics.

ISIDRO SOLOAGA is coordinator of the doctoral program in economics at the Universidad de las Américas, Puebla, Mexico. He previously was a researcher with the World Bank Developmental Research Group.

DHANANJAYAN SRISKANDARAJAH is an Associate Director of the Institute for Public Policy Research, a leading progressive think-tank based in London. His current research examines the economic, social and political impacts of migration. He has been consultant to various international organizations and is a regular media commentator on migration issues. He holds a Ph.D. from the University of Oxford, where he was a Rhodes Scholar.

ERNESTO ZEDILLO was president of Mexico from 1994–2000 and is currently director of the Yale Center for the Study of Globalization and Professor of International Economics and Politics at Yale University. He also serves as co-coordinator of the Task Force on Trade for the U.N. Millenium Project. He earned Master's and Ph.D. degrees in economics from Yale University, where he studied the issue of public indebtedness in Mexico and its link to future growth of petroleum exports.