Contributors

Tariq Ali
Tariq Ali is a novelist, historian, political campaigner, filmmaker and scriptwriter. He was heavily involved in the anti-war movement in Europe during the late 1960s and is today still very active in the Stop the War campaign. Ali is a longstanding editor of New Left Review and has written more than a dozen books on history and politics as well as a number of novels. Ali has made numerous television and radio appearances particularly since 11 September 2001 and regularly writes for the Independent and the London Review of Books amongst many other publications. Tariq Ali is currently the Editorial Director at Verso and lives in London.

Assistant Professor Reem Bahdi
University of Windsor
Reem Bahdi is an Assistant Professor with the Faculty of Law at the University of Windsor. She is also co-Director of the Project on Judicial Independence and Human Dignity, a 5 year judicial education programme currently being implemented with Birzeit University in Palestine. Her research focuses on national security and tort law. She has appeared as a media commentator and served as an expert before national and international bodies including the Commission of Inquiry into the Actions of Canadian Officials in Relation to Maher Arar.

Professor David Brown
Faculty of Law, University of New South Wales
Professor David Brown teaches criminal law at the University of New South Wales, Sydney, Australia. He has been active in criminal justice movements, issues and debates for over three decades. He is widely published and has co-authored or co-edited The Prison Struggle (1982); The Judgments of Lionel Murphy (1986); Death in the Hands of the State (1988); Criminal Laws (1990); (1996); (2001); (2006); Rethinking Law and Order (1998); Prisoners as Citizens (2002); and The New Punitiveness (2005).
Counter-terrorism and the post-democratic state

Dr Morag Goodwin
Maastricht University, The Netherlands
Morag Goodwin is Lecturer in International Law at Maastricht University, The Netherlands. She is currently preparing for the publication of her doctoral manuscript on legitimacy and participation in international law in relation to the Romani claim to non-territorial nation status.

Dr Guy S. Goodwin-Gill
All Souls College, Oxford
Guy S. Goodwin-Gill is a Senior Research Fellow at All Souls College, Oxford, and Professor of International Refugee Law in the University. He has researched and written extensively on international law, international humanitarian law, and human rights, with particular emphasis on the rights of migrants, refugees, child soldiers, free and fair elections, democracy, terrorism, and State responsibility. He is also a Barrister and practices from Blackstone Chambers, London.

Janice Gray
Faculty of Law, University of New South Wales
Janice Gray is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Law, Faculty of Law, at the University of New South Wales. She has published both nationally and internationally in the fields of Property, Equity, Native Title and Water Law. Her (co-authored) book Property Law in New South Wales was published by Butterworths in 2003 with a second edition in May, 2007.

Professor Jenny Hocking
School of Humanities, Communications and Social Sciences, Monash University
Jenny Hocking is Director of Research in the School of Humanities, Communications & Social Sciences at Monash University. She is the author of a political biography of the former High Court Justice Lionel Murphy, Lionel Murphy: a Political Biography (1997, 2000), and of the Australian communist, political activist and writer Frank Hardy, Frank Hardy: Politics Literature Life (2005) short-listed in the NSW History Awards 2006. Jenny has also written extensively on counter-terrorism and democracy, most recently in Terror Laws: ASIO, Counter-terrorism and the Threat to Democracy (2004). She has made submissions to several parliamentary inquiries into these developments and is a frequent commentator in Australian and international media on these issues. Jenny has been an Australian Research Council QEII Research Fellow 1999–2005 and a Harold White Fellow with the National Library of Australia. Jenny Hocking is now working on a biography of the former Labor Prime Minister.
Contributors

Gough Whitlam, supported by an ARC Linkage Grant, to be published by Melbourne University Press.

Devika Hovell
DPHil Candidate, University of Oxford
Devika Hovell is a DPhd Candidate at the University of Oxford, formerly Director of the International Law Project at the Gilbert + Tobin Centre of Public Law at the University of New South Wales. Research for the International Law Project, including the chapter contributed to this book, was generously funded by the Australian Research Council.

Professor John Keane
University of Westminster
Born in Australia and educated at the Universities of Adelaide, Toronto and Cambridge, John Keane is Professor of Politics at the University of Westminster and at the Wissenschaftszentrum Berlin (WZB). In 1989 he founded the Centre for the Study of Democracy. Among his many books are The Media and Democracy (1991), which has been translated into more than twenty-five languages and Civil Society: Berlin Perspectives (2006). John’s current research interests include the future of global governance; fear, violence and democracy; citizenship and civil society in Europe; the history of secularism; public life and freedom of communication; eighteenth-century republicanism; the post-communist regimes of central and eastern Europe; and the philosophy and politics of Islam. A member of the American-based Institutions of Democracy Commission, he is currently writing a full-scale history of democracy – the first for over a century.

Stephen Kenny
Stephen has practised as a Barrister and Solicitor in Australia for over 25 years. He currently practises as a commercial litigator in a private law firm, Camatta Lempen Pty Ltd in Adelaide South Australia. Stephen has always maintained a strong interest in civil libertarian matters and is the past Chairperson of the South Australian Council for Civil Liberties. In the 1990s Stephen acted for the Ngarrindjeri People during the Hindmarsh Island Bridge Affair. In January 2002 Stephen offered his services to the Adelaide family of David Hicks. On instructions from the family, Stephen commenced legal proceedings in the United States for a Writ of Habeas Corpus against President Bush and the US Military who were detaining David Hicks. That case, Rasul v Bush, resulted in the United States Supreme Court ruling that Guantanamo Bay was within the jurisdiction of the US Courts. This has led to over 70 detainees taking action against their detention in US Federal Courts. David Hicks is now represented by US lawyers but Stephen continues to advise his family in Australia.
Counter-terrorism and the post-democratic state

Giovanni Kessler
Giovanni Kessler has been Public Prosecutor at the criminal courts of Trento and Bolzano, and prosecutor at the Anti-mafia Department in Sicily. From 1996 to 2001, he was judicial expert in European Commission evaluation missions in Estonia, Hungary and The Czech Republic. Giovanni was a Member of the Italian Chamber of Deputies, elected in Trento in June 2001, representing the Ulivo centre-left coalition; Member of the Standing Committee on Justice, and Member of the Italian delegation to the Parliamentary Assembly of the OSCE. In 2003 and 2004, he was elected Vice President of the Assembly. He has participated in the International Election Monitoring missions in Kosovo, Georgia and Moldova. Giovanni has been the OSCE Special Coordinator for the parliamentary elections in Armenia and the presidential elections in Azerbaijan and Deputy Head of OSCE Election Monitoring Mission to the 2004 US presidential elections.

Lex Lasry, QC
Lex Lasry was admitted to practice in 1973 and went to the Victorian Bar the same year. He has had a primarily criminal practice and in 1990 was appointed Queen’s Counsel in Victoria in 1990 (and the following year in New South Wales and Western Australia). In 2002, he defended the first case of espionage in Australia (R v Lappas), and in the same year, was asked to assist (pro bono) an Australian citizen charged with drug importing in Singapore and subsequently in a similar case in Vietnam. In August 2004, he was appointed the Law Council of Australia’s observer at the Guantanamo Bay Military Commission trial of David Hicks. His subsequent report concluded that the military commission proceedings are flawed, making a fair trial virtually impossible.

Associate Professor Colleen Lewis
School of Humanities, Communications and Social Sciences, Monash University
Colleen Lewis is the Head of the School of Humanities, Communications and Social Sciences at Monash University. Her major research interests include police–government relations, anti-corruption models and public sector and political accountability. She is the author of Complaints Against Police: the Politics of Reform (Hawkins Press, 1999) and co-editor and contributor to the books, It’s Time Again: Whitlam and Modern Labor (circa books, 2003 with Jenny Hocking), Civilian Oversight of Police: Governance, Democracy and Human Rights (Hart Publishing, 2000 with Andrew Goldsmith), Unpeeling Tradition: Contemporary Policing (Macmillan Education, 1994 with Keith Bryett) and Corporate Management in Australian Government (Macmillan, 1989 with Glyn Davis and Patrick Weller).
Tony Maniaty
Tony Maniaty is a Sydney-based broadcast journalist, author, media lecturer and consultant specialising in strategic news management. In a career spanning three decades, he reported from East Timor, served as European Correspondent for Australia’s SBS Television, and in 1996 was appointed Executive Producer of the ABC’s The 7.30 Report. In 2006, he obtained a Masters Degree at Macquarie University with a research thesis on television and warfare, and lectured at the University of Sydney in postgraduate media studies. In 2007 he conducted a global risk reporting course at the Danish School of Journalism in Arhus. His latest essay, ‘The Lens in the Serpent’s Mouth’, appeared in Terrorism, Media, Society (Colegium Civitas, Warsaw, 2007).

Professor Thomas Mertens
Radboud University Nijmegen, The Netherlands
Thomas Mertens is professor for legal philosophy at the faculty of law and at the faculty of philosophy at the Radboud University Nijmegen, The Netherlands. He publishes regularly on a variety of subjects related to Kant, Radbruch, Arendt and Rawls. At present, he is working on a monograph on Law and Philosophy in Nazi Germany.

Dr Marjorie ‘Mo’ Mowlam (1949–2005)
Dr Mo Mowlam was a Labour Member of Parliament in the United Kingdom (1987–2001) and Secretary of State for Northern Ireland (1991–1999). During her time as Secretary of State for Northern Ireland, Dr Mowlam oversaw the signing of the historic Good Friday Peace Agreement in 1998 that lead to the establishment of the power-sharing Northern Ireland Assembly. During this period she defied her advisers and faced strong political condemnation for visiting loyalist inmates in the Maze Prison. Her experiences in parliament and as Secretary of State for Northern Ireland gave Dr Mowlam a remarkable insight into terrorism and counter-terrorism and she continued to write and speak about these matters after her retirement from politics in 2001 due to ill health. Mo Mowlam died in 2005 following treatment for a brain tumor.

Professor Sir Nigel S. Rodley KBE, PhD
Chair, Human Rights Centre University of Essex
Between his first teaching post at Dalhousie University (1965–68) and his current position, he taught part time at several institutions before and while engaged in full-time work as the founding head of Amnesty International’s legal office (1973–90). He has been UN Special Rapporteur on Torture
Counter-terrorism and the post-democratic state

(1993–2001) and is a Member of the (UN) Human Rights Committee (since 2001). He is a Commissioner of the International Commission of Jurists.

Martin Woollacott

Commentator on international affairs for the Guardian (UK)

As a correspondent for the Guardian in South East Asia, South Asia, and the Middle East, Martin Woollacott covered the final years of the Vietnam War, the Bangladesh war, the Indian Emergency, and the Iranian Revolution, among other stories. On returning to Britain, he became the paper’s foreign editor and then, in the nineties, its main commentator on international affairs. Retired from full-time Guardian employment in 2004, Martin continues to contribute to the paper. He has also been working on a study of how foreign reporters on major running stories arrive at a shared view of the meaning of the events they are following, a theme he pursued during a recent fellowship at La Trobe University in Melbourne, Australia.