Acknowledgments

I would like to take this opportunity to compliment a stellar group of Notre Dame law students and staff who contributed to this project. I am enormously grateful and thankful for their dedicated hard work. My sincere thanks to Elizabeth O’Connell (Class of 2008), Geoffrey Gasperini (Class of 2008), and Jay Ward (Class of 2009) for their valuable research assistance and suggestions. Ms O’Connell’s efforts editing some of the chapters are greatly appreciated. However, special recognition is deserved for Chris O’Byrne, research librarian, Andy Mason, staff assistant, and Sheryn Alexander, principal student research assistant. Chris O’Byrne is a valuable member of the Notre Dame Law School library staff. Mr O’Byrne’s professionalism, timely response to research requests, pleasant demeanor, and ‘can do’ attitude made him an absolute pleasure to work with throughout the entire project. Andy Mason, my highly competent and extremely professional staff assistant, made required changes and edits to early drafts of the book. Whatever I needed, Andy was always there to assist. Notre Dame Law School is fortunate to have hired Mr O’Byrne and Mr Mason. Finally, Sheryn Alexander (Class of 2009) provided invaluable research assistance, researching domestic and international cases, Congressional hearings, U.S. government and United Nations reports, reports by non-governmental organizations, international treaties, law journal articles, and other materials. She worked tirelessly editing and cite-checking endnotes, and proofreading early drafts of chapters, making important suggestions for improvement. There is no doubt that, upon graduation from law school, Ms Alexander will be an outstanding lawyer.
