Contributors

Zoltan J. Acs is University Professor at the School of Public Policy and Director of the Center for Entrepreneurship and Public Policy at George Mason University, Fairfax, VA, USA. He is also a Research Scholar at the Max Planck Institute for Economics in Jena, Germany, and Scholar-in-Residence at the Kauffman Foundation. He is coeditor and founder of Small Business Economics, the leading entrepreneurship and small business publication in the world. Acs is a leading advocate of the importance of entrepreneurship for economic development. He received the 2001 International Award for Entrepreneurship and Small Business Research on behalf of The Swedish National Board for Industrial and Technical Development. He has published more than 100 articles and 20 books, including articles in the American Economic Review, Review of Economics and Statistics, Kyklos, Journal of Urban Economics, Economica, Research Policy and Science Policy. His most recent publication is Entrepreneurship, Geography and American Economic Growth, Cambridge University Press.

Robert B. Anderson is a Professor with the Faculty of Business Administration of the University of Regina in Regina, SK, Canada. Prior to joining the faculty, Anderson spent ten years with the First Nations University of Canada. He has a PhD in regional economic development (geography). Anderson also has an MBA and is a Certified Management Accountant. He has authored numerous peer-reviewed papers and made many conference presentations on economic development and entrepreneurship. He is the author of two books on the subject, co-author of a third and co-editor of a handbook research on indigenous entrepreneurship. More recent work has expanded to include corporate social responsibility and sustainable development. Anderson is the editor of the Journal of Small Business and Entrepreneurship, the regional editor for Canada for the International Journal of Entrepreneurship and Small Business, an associate editor of the Journal of Aboriginal Economic Development, an associate editor of the Journal of Asia Entrepreneurship and Sustainability and a founding editor of the Journal of Enterprising Communities. He is the past President of the Canadian Council for Small Business and Entrepreneurship and a past Director of the International Council for Small Business. He is also a member of the Small Business Research Advisory Committee of the Department of Industry and Commerce Canada.
Robert F. Ashcraft is Founding Director of the Lodestar Center for Philanthropy and Nonprofit Innovation at Arizona State University, Phoenix, AZ, USA, and Associate Professor of Nonprofit Studies in the School of Community Resources and Development at ASU. Ashcraft teaches courses in nonprofit management, fundraising/philanthropy and graduate seminars in critical issues of the nonprofit sector. His research interests have resulted in publications on subjects dealing with nonprofit organization leadership and management, youth development, philanthropy and volunteerism. He serves in a number of leadership roles including his current role as President of the Nonprofit Academic Centers Council. Ashcraft earned his baccalaureate degree from the University of Arizona, an MA in education from Northern Arizona University, and his PhD from Arizona State University.

David B. Audretsch is Director of the Max Planck Institute of Economics in Jena, Germany. He also serves as a Scholar-in-Residence at the Ewing Marion Kauffman Foundation. In addition, he is an Honorary Professor at the Friedrich Schiller University of Jena, Research Professor at Durham University, a Distinguished Professor and the Ameritech Chair of Economic Development and Director of the Institute for Development Strategies at Indiana University, an External Director of Research at the Kiel Institute for the World Economics, and is a Research Fellow of the Centre for Economic Policy Research (London). Audretsch’s research has focused on the links between entrepreneurship, government policy, innovation, economic development and global competitiveness. Audretsch is ranked as the 21st most-cited scholar in economics and business, 1996–2006. His research has been published in over 100 scholarly articles in the leading academic journals. His books include Entrepreneurship and Economic Growth, with Oxford University Press in 2006 and The Entrepreneurial Society, also with Oxford University Press in 2007. He is co-founder and co-editor of Small Business Economics: An Entrepreneurship Journal. He was awarded the 2001 International Award for Entrepreneurship and Small Business Research by the Swedish Foundation for Small Business Research.

Peter J. Boettke is University Professor of Economics at George Mason University, Fairfax, VA, USA. He is the author of several books on the history, collapse and transition from socialism in the former Soviet Union: The Political Economy of Soviet Socialism: The Formative Years, 1918–1928 (Kluwer, 1990); Why Perestroika Failed: The Economics and Politics of Socialism Transformation (Routledge, 1993); and Calculation and Coordination: Essays on Socialism and Transitional Political Economy (Routledge, 2001). He is also co-author, along with David Prychitko, of the classic principles of economics texts of Paul Heyne’s The Economic Way of Christopher J. Coyne is Assistant Professor in the Department of Economics at West Virginia University, Morgantown, WV, USA, a Research Fellow at the Mercatus Center, and an Associate Editor for the Review of Austrian Economics. He has published articles in numerous scholarly journals and is the author of After War: the Political Economy of Exporting Democracy (Stanford University Press, 2007).

Sameeksha Desai is Assistant Professor of Entrepreneurship and Innovation at the Henry W. Bloch School of Business and Public Administration, University of Missouri, Columbia, MO. She is also a Visiting Research Fellow at the Max Planck Institute of Economics. She is a multi-year grantee of a joint fellowship from the Kauffmann Foundation and Max Planck Institute of Economics. Her research interests are entrepreneurship, political instability and conflict, and social innovation.

Peter M. Frank is Assistant Professor of Economics at The School of Business, Wingate University, Wingate, NC, USA. His recent research focuses on the application of entrepreneurship theory in non-market contexts, namely the role of entrepreneurs in the nonprofit sector and their contribution to regional economic development. He holds a BA in economics from Grove City College, Grove City, PA, an MS in economics from the University of North Carolina at Charlotte, and a PhD from The School of Public Policy, George Mason University, Fairfax, VA.

Kingsley E. Haynes is the Ruth D. and John T. Hazel MD Professor of Public Policy and Dean of the School of Public Policy at George Mason University, Fairfax, VA, USA. He holds his PhD in Geography and Environmental Engineering from The Johns Hopkins University. Haynes was the director of McGill’s Urban Studies Center, Texas’ Joint Center for West Texas Environmental Studies and Indiana University’s Regional Economic Development Institute. He worked overseas on air transport projects, regional development programming, water resource and environmental management projects, and investment evaluation programs. In North America he has worked on coastal zone management projects, environment and energy projects, and transportation projects. Haynes is also an active researcher in the field of regional economic development policy with over 200 articles, 150 professional reports and ten books and has received numerous awards, fellowships, and recognition for his research. From 1995 to 1997 he was President of the 40-nation Regional Science Association International.

Kevin G. Hindle is Professor of Entrepreneurship at the Australian Graduate School of Entrepreneurship, Swinburne University of Technology, Melbourne, VIC, Australia. He is a researcher, educator, management consultant and private equity investor. His variety of expertise and interests embrace many aspects of managing in conditions of uncertainty. His research, teaching, managerial and consulting work focuses on entrepreneurial business planning but also include investment evaluation (especially in the field of venture capital), market and financial modeling, change management, organizational design, corporate strategy and management training. Applying leading-edge research to practical problems, he has initiated and developed new ventures and worked for organizations large and small, public and private, Australian and international. As a researcher, Hindle has authored over 80 publications including more than 50 peer-reviewed papers in a range of respected international journals and conference proceedings. He is Australian Project Director of the Global Entrepreneurship Monitor (GEM), the world’s largest entrepreneurship research initiative. He is a ministerially appointed foundation member of Australia’s National Innovation Awareness Council and on the advisory board of the International Danish Entrepreneurship Academy (IDEA).

Bob Kayseas is a member of the Fishing Lake First Nation, a Saulteaux community in east central Saskatchewan, Canada. Kayseas obtained a degree in Business Administration and a Master of Business Administration from the University of Regina. He is presently enrolled in a PhD (Enterprise and Innovation) program at the Australian Graduate School of Entrepreneurship, Swinburne University of Technology in Melbourne, Australia. He has been employed, first as a Lecturer and currently as an Assistant Professor, at the First Nations University of Canada, School of Business and Public Administration since the fall of 2000 and was appointed Department Head in April 2007. His primary areas of research are in the economic development and entrepreneurship of Indigenous Canadians with a particular focus on the reserve ‘status’ populations. He also teaches economic development, entrepreneurship, and small business management courses.

Roger Koppl is the Director of the Institute for Forensic Science Administration of Fairleigh Dickinson University, Madison, NJ, USA, where he is also a Professor of Economics and Finance. He has served on the faculty of the Copenhagen Business School, Auburn University, and Auburn University at Montgomery. He has held visiting positions at George Mason University, New York University, and the Max Planck Institute of Economics. He is the editor of Advances in Austrian Economics and the book review editor of Journal of Economic Behavior and Organization. Koppl conducts research in forensic science administration, which studies how error rates in forensic science are affected by institutional and organizational structures.

Miri Lerner is Associate Professor at the Academic College of Tel-Aviv-Yaffo, Tel-Aviv, Israel, The School of Management and Economy and the head of its entrepreneurship unit. Her current research interests include corporate entrepreneurship, R&D transfer, social entrepreneurship, and immigrants and women entrepreneurship. She was the team leader of GEM (Global Entrepreneurship Monitor) in Israel from 1999 to 2006, and currently serves as a team member. She is the author of many scholarly articles and has published in journals such as Research Policy, Journal of Business Venturing, Small Business Economics, Journal of World Business, Journal of Small Business Management, Journal of Social Policy, and Work and Occupations.

Scott W. MacAulay earned his PhD from the University of Leeds, West Yorkshire, England, where he also completed his Master’s degree. His research interests include political economy, community economic development, and the sociology of disability. MacAulay has played a central role in many activities of Cape Breton University’s Community Economic Development Institute, including the MBA program in Community Economic Development.

Maria Minniti is Professor and Bobby B. Lyle Chair in Entrepreneurship at the Cox School of Business at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, TX, USA. Minniti holds a PhD in Economics from New York University, a Master of Science in Economics from Auburn University, and an undergraduate degree in Political Science from the University of Rome, Italy. Minniti has also been a visiting professor in several universities, including London Business School, Humboldt University, Copenhagen Business School and the Max Planck Institute of Economics. She has published numerous articles on entrepreneurship, economic growth and complexity theory, as well as book chapters and research monographs. She is associate editor of Small Business Economics Journal and a member of the Global Entrepreneurship Monitor (GEM) project, the world’s largest ongoing cross-country study of entrepreneurial dynamics.
Simon C. Parker is a Professor at Durham University in Durham, England and Head of the Department of Economics and Finance at Durham Business School in the United Kingdom. He is a Research Professor at the Max Planck Institute of Economics and a Fellow of IZA, both in Germany. Parker publishes widely in the economics of entrepreneurship.

Ronnie J. Phillips received his BA in Urban Studies from the University of Oklahoma, Norman, OK, USA, in 1973 and his PhD in Economics from The University of Texas at Austin in 1980. He is a Senior Fellow at Networks Financial Institute in Indianapolis, IN, and Professor of Economics at Colorado State University, where he has taught since 1983. From 2001–2006, he was Chairman of the Economics Department. He was the recipient of the Oliver Pennock Distinguished Service Award from CSU in 2000. He has published widely on banking issues, entrepreneurship, and public policy in books, academic journals, newspapers, magazines, and public policy briefs. His current research interests are payday lending and entrepreneurship in the music industry. He also has been a visiting scholar in many educational and government institutions and is a past president of the Association for Evolutionary Economics.

Moshe Sharir is Acting Director of the Institute for Immigration and Social Integration at Ruppin Academic Center, Emek Hefer, Israel, focusing especially on the center policy and activities in civic engagement. He lectures also on social entrepreneurship at Ashkelon Academic College, coming to the field after a long career in managing educational and welfare organizations. A reserve colonel, Sharir served in the Israel Defense Forces for nearly 25 years and in his last assignment was responsible for the pre-military training of Israeli youth. He was the division head of the American joint distribution committee in Israel and the director general of Ben Gurion College at Sde Boker. He was also the founder and chairperson of the first incubator for social entrepreneurs in Israel. He holds a PhD from Ben-Gurion University of the Negev.

Gordon E. Shockley is Assistant Professor of Social Entrepreneurship and a Faculty Associate of the Lodestar Center for Philanthropy and Nonprofit Innovation at Arizona State University, Phoenix, AZ, USA. His research interests span non-market entrepreneurship, public policy analysis, and the politics, economics, and sociology of the arts and humanities. He earned a PhD in public policy from George Mason University, an MM from the J.L. Kellogg Graduate School of Management, Northwestern University, and a BA in Ancient Greek and English Languages and Literature from the University of California, Los Angeles. He also has several years of public service at all levels of US government.
Roger R. Stough is the NOVA Endowed Chair, Eminent Scholar and Professor of Public Policy, Associate Dean for Research, Director of Mason Enterprise Center, and Director of the National (USDOT UTC) Transport and Regional Economic Development Research Center, all at George Mason University, Fairfax, VA, USA. Stough’s education includes a BS in International Trade from Ohio State University; an MA in Economic Geography from the University of South Carolina; and a PhD in Geography and Environmental Engineering from the Johns Hopkins University. He also holds a Honoris Causa Doctoral degree from Jonkoping University in Jonkoping, Sweden. His research specializations include leadership and entrepreneurship in regional economic development, regional economic modeling and transport analysis and planning. During the past 10 years Stough has been heavily involved in development related research in China and India and in the development of entrepreneurship training and education programs including advising enterprise development and incubation centers there. He currently serves as President of the Regional Science Association International (RSAI) (2007–2008) and is the joint editor of the Annals of Regional Science. He is also the President of the Technopolicy Network, a global membership organization that promotes the use of science and technology in the development process.

Ronit Yitshaki is Assistant Professor in the department of sociology at Bar Ilan University, Ramat-Gan, Israel. Her dissertation ‘Relations between venture capitalists and entrepreneurs: managerial interventions in high technology companies in Israel’ examined the determinants of the level of venture capitalists’ involvement in high technology start-ups. Her dissertation was accorded a writing scholarship from the Israel Foundation Trustees (Ford Foundation) and also received the Schnitzer Foundation Award for Research on the Israeli Economy and Society for its contributions to the Israeli economy. Her research interests include venture capital investments, high technology firms’ failure, and social entrepreneurship.

Dennis R. Young is the Bernard B. and Eugenia A. Ramsey Professor of Private Enterprise in the Andrew Young School of Policy Studies at Georgia State University, Atlanta, GA, USA, where he directs the school’s nonprofit studies program. He is also President and Founding CEO of the National Center on Nonprofit Enterprise. His interests focus on the management and economics of nonprofit organizations. He is the founding editor of the journal Nonprofit Management and Leadership and past president of the Association for Research on Nonprofit Organizations and Voluntary Action (ARNOVA). He is the author of many scholarly articles, and author or editor of several books on nonprofit organizations including If Not for Profit for What? (Lexington Books), A Casebook of Management for Nonprofit Organizations (Haworth Books), Governing, Leading and Managing the Nonprofit Organization (with Robert Hollister and Virginia Hodgkinson, Jossey-Bass), Nonprofit Organizations in a Market Economy (with David Hammack, Jossey-Bass), Economics for Nonprofit Managers (with Richard Steinberg, The Foundation Center), and Effective Economic Decisionmaking for Nonprofit Organizations (The Foundation Center). Young has received a number of honors, including ARNOVA’s 2004 Award for Distinguished Achievement and Leadership in Nonprofit and Voluntary Action Research, and the Award for Innovation in Nonprofit Research from the Israeli Center for Third Sector Research at Ben Gurion University in 2005. He was named to the Nonprofit Times Power and Influence Top 50 List in 2004.