Contributors

Richard Barnes is Senior Lecturer in Law at the University of Hull, where he specialises in marine, environmental and international law. His publications include Law of the Sea: Progress and Prospects (ed. with David Freestone and David Ong, Oxford: OUP, 2006) and Property Rights and Natural Resources (Oxford: Hart, 2009).

Michael Bowman is a graduate of the University of Nottingham, where he was awarded the LLB with first-class honours. He joined the teaching staff in 1973 and was appointed to Senior Lecturer in 1989. His principal teaching and research interests lie in the field of public international law, particularly international environmental law, the law of treaties and the practice of treaty-making. He is Rapporteur of the International Environmental Law Committee of the British Branch of the International Law Association and has undertaken extensive committee and consultancy work in the fields of animal welfare and environmental protection and has recently published substantial articles on the topics of wetland conservation, the protection of birds and the animal welfare dimension of the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species.

Edith Brown Weiss is the Francis Cabell Brown Professor of International Law, Georgetown University Law Center. From 2003–2007, she served as the Chairperson of the World Bank Inspection Panel (Vice Presidential level), and from 1990–1992 as Associate General Counsel for International Law at the US Environmental Protection Agency. She was President of the American Society of International Law, is an Honorary Member of the Indian Society of International Law, and serves on the editorial boards of many international law journals.

Anne Christine Brusendorff has Master of Laws (University of Copenhagen, Denmark and London School of Economics and Political Science, United Kingdom), PhD (University of Copenhagen, Denmark). She has dealt with the maritime and response fields within HELCOM from 1998, and since 2003 is HELCOM Executive Secretary.

Louise Angélique de La Fayette is an international lawyer and diplomat, currently Visiting Professor, Maritime Institute, University of Greenwich. From 2002–2006, she was a Director in the United Nations Division for Ocean Affairs and the Law of the Sea. From 1997–2002, she was Reader in International Law at the University of Southampton, and Marine Policy Adviser for IUCN, representing it at international meetings and conferences. From 1981–1997, she worked in the Canadian Department of Foreign Affairs, mainly on the law of the sea and international environmental law. She has published many articles on the law of the sea and international environmental law, and served as counsel for Canada in the Gulf of Maine Maritime Boundary case and the Fisheries Jurisdiction case (Spain v. Canada) before the ICJ and the Canada/France Maritime Boundary Abritration.

Nicolas de Sadeleer is Professor of EU and Comparative Law, FUSL and UCL, Academy of Louvain Guest Professor Paris II and Fribourg.

Mark A. Drumbl is the Class of 1975 Alumni Chair Professor at Washington & Lee University, School of Law, where he also serves as Director of the Transnational Law Institute. He has held visiting appointments on several law faculties, including Oxford, Vanderbilt, Ottawa, and Paris. His research and teaching interests include public international law, international environmental law, international criminal law, and transitional justice. His book, Atrocity, Punishment, and International Law (Cambridge: CUP, 2007) has won awards from the International Association of Criminal Law (US Section) and the American Society of International Law.

Olufemi Elias MA (Oxon), LLM (Cantab), PhD (London). Dr Elias is currently a Visiting Professor at Queen Mary, University of London and the Executive Secretary of the World Bank Administrative Tribunal. Formerly a lecturer in International Law at King’s College London, he has worked as Legal Adviser at the United Nations Compensation Commission in Geneva and as Senior Legal Officer at the Organisation for the Prohibition of Chemical Weapons in The Hague.

Malgosia Fitzmaurice holds a chair of public international law at the Department of Law, Queen Mary, University of London and is the Editor-in-Chief of the International Community Law Review. She specialises in international environmental law and the law of treaties and has published extensively in these fields.

David Freestone has been Lobingier Visiting Professor of Comparative Law and Jurisprudence at the George Washington University Law School in Washington, DC since January 2009. From 1996–2004, he was Chief Counsel and Head of the International Environment Law Group and from 2004–2008 Deputy General Counsel and Senior Adviser in the Office of the General Counsel at The World Bank in Washington, DC.

Duncan French is reader in international law at the University of Sheffield. His research interests include international environmental law, international economic law and the international legal implications of sustainable development. He is co-rapporteur of the International Law Association (ILA) Committee on International Law on Sustainable Development and a senior research fellow of the Centre for International Sustainable Development Law, Montreal.

Paolo Galizzi is a Clinical Associate Professor of Law and Director of the Sustainable Development Legal Initiative (SDLI) at the Leitner Center for International Law and Justice at Fordham Law School. Professor Galizzi’s research interests lie in international law, environmental law and law of sustainable development and he has published extensively in these areas.

Alexander Gillespie LLB, LLM(Hons) (Auckland), PhD (Nottingham), Professor of Law, University of Waikato, New Zealand. Professor Gillespie has been awarded fellowships from the Rotary, Fulbright, Rockefeller and New Zealand Law Foundation.
Joanna Gomula is a graduate of the University of Warsaw and University of Michigan, and holds a Doctorate in Law from the Polish Academy of Sciences. She is a Fellow at the Lauterpacht Centre for International Law, University of Cambridge and a Visiting Reader at the Centre for Commercial Law Studies, Queen Mary College, University of London.

Alena Herklotz is the Adam and Brittany Levinson Fellow in International Law of Sustainable Development with the Sustainable Development Legal Initiative of the Leitner Center for International Law and Justice, Fordham Law School.

Karen Hulme is a Senior Lecturer at the University of Essex, UK. Karen’s first book, entitled Worn Torn Environment: Interpreting the Legal Threshold won the 2004 ASIL Francis Lieber Prize, and her writing concerns environmental protection through human rights law and humanitarian law.

Natalie Klein is an Associate Professor at Macquarie Law School, Sydney, Australia, where she teaches and researches in the area of international law, and more specifically, law of the sea, international dispute settlement, international organisations and human rights. Dr Klein is the author of Dispute Settlement in the UN Convention on the Law of the Sea (Cambridge: CUP, 2005). Prior to joining Macquarie, Dr Klein worked in the international litigation practice of a New York law firm, was a consultant in the Office of Legal Affairs at the United Nations and served as counsel to the Government of Eritrea.

Katharina Kummer Peiry is the Executive Secretary of the Basel Convention on the Control of Transboundary Movements of Hazardous Wastes and their Disposal. She is a specialist in international environmental law and policy. Dr Kummer Peiry previously served as a staff member of UNEP and of the Swiss Agency of Environment, and as Head of Section of Environmental Affairs in the Swiss Federal Department of Foreign Affairs.

Feja Lesniewska is a final year PhD student at the School of Law, School of Oriental and African Studies, University of London. She is also a teaching assistant at both Queen Mary and SOAS on the LLM’s in International Environmental Law, Law and Natural Resources, Climate Change Law and Policy and Law, Environment and Development. Her research interests include international law and natural resources, especially forests, governance and climate change.

Gerhard Loibl is Resident Professor of International Law and Law of the European Union at the Diplomatic Academy of Vienna, Professor at the University of Vienna, Institute for International Law and International Relations, Visiting Professor at the University of London; consultant for the Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry, Environment and Water Management; and a member of Austrian delegations to conferences and expert-meetings within the UN, EU and OECD.

Panos Merkouris MA (University of Athens), LLM (University of Athens & UCL), PhD (Queen Mary, University of London). Panos Merkouris is the Managing Editor of the International Community Law Review and a scholarship holder from IKY (Greek State Scholarship Foundation) and Queen Mary. He specialises in law of treaties, international law of the sea, state responsibility, human rights and humanitarian law. His publications include: The Issues of Treaty Interpretation and the Vienna Convention on the Law of Treaties: 30 Years On (The Hague: Martinus Nijhoff/BRILL, 2010; co-editor with Professor Malgosia

Phoebe Okowa is Reader in Public International Law at Queen Mary, University of London.

David M. Ong LLB, LLM (Hull). Arriving at the University of Essex from the University of Hull in 1995, where he lectured from 1992, David has been able to continue his research and writing in International Law of the Sea and International Environmental Law. He teaches on the Public International Law, Environmental Law and Public Law undergraduate modules, as well as the EC Environmental Law and Law, Politics and Sociology modules at the Masters level. David is currently Graduate Director of Taught Modules.

Hanna Paulomäki has graduated in ecology from the University of Helsinki. She has been working with nature protection and sustainable development issues since 1996 and in the field of international environment policy since 2000. Since 2005 she has been working as a scientific assistant at the Helsinki Commission.

Minna Pyhälä has degrees in marine biology (University of California at Santa Cruz) as well as environment and development (University of East Anglia). She has been working with nature conservation and sustainable development issues since 1994 and in the field of international environment policy since 2003.

Jona Razzaque is a Barrister and Reader in Law at the University of the West of England (UWE), Bristol, UK. She is the author of Public Interest Environmental Litigation in India, Pakistan and Bangladesh (The Hague: Kluwer Law International, 2004). Her research interests include environmental governance, natural resource management and access to environmental justice.

Priscilla Schwartz is a lecturer in law at the University of Leicester, UK, where she convenes and teaches LLM courses in international law. She is also a barrister and solicitor of the supreme court of Sierra Leone. She is the author of Sustainable Development and Mining in Sierra Leone (Kent: Pneuma Springs Publishing, 2006). She previously served as legal counsel to the government of Sierra Leone where she participated in several international negotiations including with the World Bank and the UN. She was instrumental in the setting up of the UN Special Court for Sierra Leone, and participated in the drafting of its Statute and Agreements. She has strong research interest in international public policy and law in areas of trade, development and environment, especially their implication for developing countries.

Karen N. Scott is a senior lecturer in law at the University of Canterbury in New Zealand, formally a lecturer at the University of Nottingham in the UK. Her particular interests comprise the law of the sea, international environmental law and the Polar Regions. She has published widely in journals such as the ICLQ Journal of Environmental Law and Georgetown International Environmental Law Review. Karen is the Associate Editor of the New Zealand Yearbook of International Law.

Dinah Shelton is Manatt/Ahn Professor of International Law at The George Washington University, USA. She is a member of the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights.

Geir Ulfstein is Professor of International Law at the Department of Public and International Law, University of Oslo. He is former co-editor-in-chief of the Yearbook of International Environmental Law (OUP) and has published on the law of the sea, international environmental law, international human rights and international institutional law.