Contributors

Francesco Angelini, European Commission DG for Regional Policy, Evaluation Unit
Francesco Angelini is a cost–benefit analysis specialist working for the European Commission. He is currently with the Evaluation Unit at the Directorate General for Regional Policy. He has particular responsibility for cost–benefit analysis of major investment projects financed by the Structural Funds and the Cohesion Fund.

Giles Atkinson, London School of Economics
Giles Atkinson is currently Lecturer in Environmental Policy at the London School of Economics and Political Science, is Honorary Senior Fellow at the Centre for Social and Economic Research on the Global Environment (CSERGE), University of East Anglia and is a serving member of the Department of Environment, Food and Rural Affairs (DEFRA) Environmental Economics Academic Panel.

José Carbajo, EBRD
José Carbajo is currently the Director for Strategy and Policy Development in the Infrastructure Business Group of the European Bank for Reconstruction and Development (EBRD). Previously he was Director for Project Design and Appraisal at the Office of the Chief Economist of the EBRD where he contributed to the development and use of the transition impact methodology.

Gianni Carbonaro, European Investment Bank
He currently is at the European Investment Bank, Urban Development Unit. He previously was Visiting Lecturer in Urban and Regional Economics at Reading University (UK). At the EIB he has worked in multi-professional teams covering the economic and financial assessment of large-scale infrastructure projects in transport and urban development. More recently, he has been involved in programme and multi-sector lending operations in cities and regions, often co-financed by the European Structural Funds.

Ginés De Rus, University of Las Palmas
Ginés De Rus is Professor of Economics in the University of Las Palmas (Spain) and director of Economics of Infrastructure and Transport (EIT).
He has worked in several research projects for the European Commission and has been the co-director of two International Training Programmes of the World Bank on Transport Regulation and Privatization. He has collaborated with the EIB and is currently working for the Inter-American Development Bank preparing the cost–benefit analysis guidelines of the IADB.

David Evans, Oxford Brookes University
David Evans joined Oxford Brookes University in September 1987. He has taught on a wide range of undergraduate Economics courses in the Business School and has also taught on the MBA. He has previously worked at HM Treasury and is currently a member of the Institute for Fiscal Studies. His main research interests are in welfare economics and consumer demand analysis.

Massimo Florio, University of Milan
Massimo Florio is Head of the Department of Economics, Business and Statistics, University of Milan, professor of Public Economics and Jean Monnet Chair in Economics of European Integration. Florio has been a Visiting Scholar at the LSE and in several other British universities and international organizations. His main research interests are in welfare economics, cost–benefit analysis, evaluation of public policies, industrial and regional policies for small business development, infrastructure and growth, regulation and privatization of services of general interest.

Per-Olov Johansson, Stockholm School of Economics
Per-Olov Johansson is currently Professor of Economics at the Department of Economics of the Stockholm School of Economics (Sweden), and Adjunct Professor (Professor II) at the Department of Economics of the University of Oslo, Norway. Previously he was Professor of Environmental Economics at the Swedish University of Agricultural Sciences.

Erhun Kula, University of Ulster
Erhun Kula currently teaches at the University of Ulster in Jordanstown, Belfast and the Centre for Financial and Management Studies, University of London. He previously taught at Universities of New Mexico, Wales, Mumbai, Bosphorus, Hong Kong, Hanoi and Thrace (Greece). He advised a number of private and public bodies including the Economic and Social Research Council of Britain for the creation of research centres in the UK.

Andrea Mairate, European Commission
Head of Unit ‘Control and Audit II’ – Directorate General for Regional Policy, European Commission. He has published studies on regional policy and evaluation issues. He has been Visiting Professor at Bocconi University (Milan) on regional economics and evaluation of public policies, and at the University of Padua, Faculty of Political Science, Department ‘European Integration’ (Jean Monnet Chair).

Susana Mourato, Centre for Environmental Policy (CEP)
Susana Mourato joined Imperial College in October 1998 where she is senior lecturer in Environmental Economics, co-convenes the Environmental Economics & Policy Option of the MSc in Environmental Technology and lectures a variety of graduate courses in Environmental Economics and Social Research Methods. She is Honorary Senior Fellow at the Centre for Social and Economic Research on the Global Environment (CSERGE).

Robert Picciotto, Global Policy Project
Robert Picciotto worked at the International Finance Corporation and in the World Bank, as agricultural economist, division chief of agricultural industries, assistant director for agriculture and rural development, and director of projects in three of the World Bank’s Regions. He also served as Vice President for Corporate Planning and Budgeting and, as Director-General, Evaluation, reporting directly to the executive directors. He currently is Visiting Professor at Kings College, London.

Emile Quinet, Ecole Nationale des Ponts et Chaussées, Paris
Emile Quinet has held several positions in the French Ministry of Transports, and has been Head of the Economics and Social Sciences Department in the Ecole nationale des ponts et chaussées. He presently is Member of the CERAS-PSE and acts as an Economic consultant. Invited professor at the Ecole polytechnique fédérale de Lausanne, he is Member of the National Academy of Technologies (France).

Pascale Scapecchi, OECD
Pascale Scapecchi is an environmental economist, specializing in the valuation of environmental risks to human health. At the OECD she leads projects on the linkages between environment and health, more particularly on the valuation of environment-related health impacts for children. Published work includes recent articles on the valuation of benefits associated with the links between environmental policy and industrial organization.

Haluk Sezer, Brookes University Oxford
Haluk Sezer was a lecturer at Leicester Polytechnic (De Montfort University), then he joined Oxford Brookes University in 1989 and has taught on a wide range of undergraduate economics and postgraduate courses in the Business School, where he is currently module leader for undergraduate courses. His main current research interests are in welfare economics, European economics and Turkey.

Michael Spackman, Nera and LSE

Michael Spackman worked for government, as a scientist and subsequently an economist, including chief economist of the UK Department of Transport, and as the senior microeconomist in HM Treasury. He currently is an adviser to NERA Economic Consulting and a Visiting Fellow at the Centre for Analysis of Risk and Regulation at the London School of Economics.