Tables

1.1 The growing importance of trade for national economies 9
1.2 The importance of the EU, Japan and the US in world trade: 2004 11
2.1 Number of dispute resolution cases involving the three governments 28
3.1 International trade and the US economy 49
3.2 Relative prosperity and decline in manufacturing 49
3.3 Winners and losers in US urban population: 1990–2006 50
4.1 Issues raised about US trade policies in 2002 and 2007 60
4.2 Issues raised in 2007 but not in 2002 83
4.3 Issues raised about US trade policies in 2002 but not in 2007 89
5.1 Changing support for the EU 108
5.2 Changing EU unemployment rates 109
6.1 Issues raised concerning EU trade practices in 2002 and 2007 113
6.2 Cases raised only in 2006/2007 121
6.3 Issues raised only in 2002 125
7.1 Bursting the Japanese bubble 142
8.1 Trade issues about Japan raised in 2002 and 2007 148
8.2 Japanese trading issues raised in 2007 but not in 2002 162
8.3 Issues raised in 2002 but not in 2007 165
9.1 The aggregate counts of trade complaints 174
9.2 Issue counts by subject area 176
9.3 On the persistence of EU–US trade issues 176
9.4 Timelines and outcomes of the WTO dispute resolution cases 178
9.5 Aggregated timelines and outcomes 180
9.6 Major issues raised in 2002 and 2007 180
9.7 Issues that appeared only in the 2002 lists 181
9.8 Issues raised for the first time in 2007 182
9.9 Trade issues by subject and extent of international agreement 183
9.10 Measures of trade liberalization and the number of trade complaints 185
9.11 Trade issues that could have potentially significant impacts 187