Notes on the Contributors

ASSEFA ADMASSIE was an Associate Professor at the Addis Ababa University before he moved to his current position in 2004 as the Director of the Ethiopian Economic Policy Research Institute. He has also worked in various capacities at the Alemaya University and as a Senior Research Fellow at the Center for Development Research at the University of Bonn. Dr. Assefa Admassie received his Ph.D. degree from the University of Hohenheim in Stuttgart-Germany. Together with his colleague Professor Arjun Bedi, Admassie won the Global Medal for Outstanding Research on Development in 2004.

RASHMI BANGA is currently an economist with the United Nations Conference on Trade and Development (UNCTAD-India Programme). She received her doctorate and Masters degrees from the Delhi School of Economics, India. She was an Associate Professor in the School of International Studies, Jawaharlal Nehru University (JNU), India. She has taught at Delhi University, Jesus and Mary College, for 15 years. She has also been a consultant for the Indian Council for Research in International Economic Relations (ICRIER) and has worked extensively on various trade and investment-related issues.

ARJUN SINGH BEDI is a Professor in the Economics of Development Group at the Institute of Social Studies in the Netherlands. He earned graduate degrees in Economics from Tulane University and has previously held appointments at the University of Bonn, National University of Ukraine and Columbia University. His research focuses on human capital and labor market issues in developing countries and more recently the link between economic reforms and socio-cultural practices in India.

JAVIER ESCOBAL is Research Director and Senior Researcher with the Group of Analysis for Development (GRADE) in Lima, Peru. His research focuses on rural development, poverty and equity issues, particularly the impact of the macroeconomic adjustment and structural reforms in the farming sector. He holds a doctorate in development economics from Wageningen University, the Netherlands.

JOSÉ MARÍA FANELLI is a Senior Researcher at the Center for the Study of the State and Society (CEDES) in Argentina. He holds a Ph.D. in economics from the University of Buenos Aires. He specializes in the analysis of macroeconomic and financial problems in developing countries and has been actively involved in the establishment of permanent research networks in the Latin American region.

ALESSANDRO FEDERICI received a Ph.D. in economics at the University of Rome 'La Sapienza' in Italy with a thesis on socioeconomic vulnerability. His research interests are econometrics, environmental economics and socioeconomic development and vulnerability. He is a Research Fellow at ENEA (Italian National Agency for New Technologies, Energy and the Environment) specializing on the topic of environmental and economic data analysis for sustainable energy planning and management.

DAVID MAYER-FOULKES has been a researcher in economics at the Centro de Investigación y Docencia Económicas in Mexico since 1991, and a visiting fellow at the Kiel Institute for the World Economy, Brown University and the University of California – Los Angeles. He has directed a series of research projects on the impact of health on economic growth for the Pan American Health Organization. Professor Mayer-Foulkes has won two Global Development Medals for Research on Development.

ROBERTO ROMERO HIDALGO works at the Research Department of Banco de México.

PAUL K. KIMALU is a researcher at the Kenya Institute for Public Policy Research and Analysis (KIPPRA), Nairobi, Kenya.

DAMIANO KULUNDU MANDA is a senior lecturer at the University of Nairobi School of Economics and a research associate at the Kenya Institute for Public Policy Research and Analysis (KIPPRA). He has an M.A. in Economics from the University of Nairobi, Kenya, and a doctorate from Gothenburg University, Sweden, where he studied development economics and specialized in labor economics.

PIERLUIGI MONTALBANO is Director of the International Economics and Political Economy program at the University of Cassino. He has doctorate in international economics from Sapienza University in Rome and the Graduate Institute of International Studies in Geneva. His research addresses international commerce, European integration, economic vulnerability and the macroeconomic relations among countries of various levels of development.

NANCY NAFULA holds B.A. and M.A. degrees in economics. She is currently working as a policy analyst at the Kenya Institute for Public Policy Research and Analysis (KIPPRA). She is also serving as a member of the governing council at the Kenya Institute for Education (K.I.E). Ms. Nafula, along with Paul Kimalu, Arjun Bedi and Damiano K. Manda, won second prize in the 2003 Global Development Network Research Medals competition.

MOHAMMED OMRAN is the Vice Chairman of the Cairo and Alexandria Stock Exchanges and Professor of Finance at the Arab Academy for Science and Technology. Professor Omran has been a visiting professor at the University of Plymouth, the University of Oklahoma, the World Bank, University of Laval and Vaasa University. He has served as an economist at both the Arab Monetary Fund in Abu Dhabi and the International Monetary Fund in Washington DC. He has received several research grants and prizes, a Fulbright fellowship, and he is a Research Fellow at the Economic Research Forum. He specializes in financial markets, corporate governance, corporate finance and privatization concentrating on the MENA region.

CARLO PIETROBELLI is Professor of Economics at the University of Roma Tre, where he directs the Center for Research on the Economics of Institutions (CREI). He has served as consultant and policy advisor to major international organizations such as the European Commission, the World Bank, the Inter-American Development Bank, and various UN agencies. His last book, Upgrading to Compete: Global Value Chains, Clusters and SMEs in Latin America, was published by Harvard University Press in 2007.

CARMEN PONCE teaches at Pontificia Universidad Católica del Perú and at the University of Texas at Austin. She earned an M.S. in economics from the University of Texas at Austin. Her areas of interest are poverty and equity, rural economics and development, and employment and labor markets.

VLADIMIR POPOV is a Professor at the New Economic School in Moscow, a sector head at the Academy of the National Economy in Moscow and Visiting Professor at Carleton University in Ottawa. In 1996–98 he was a Senior Research Fellow at the World Institute for Development Economics Research of the United Nations University (WIDER/UNU) in Helsinki, Finland, co-directing a project ‘Transition Strategies, Alternatives and Outcomes’.

AMARTYA SEN is currently the Lamont University Professor at Harvard University and previously was Master of Trinity College of Cambridge University. Sen's work has focused on poverty, welfare economics and social choice theory. He was awarded the Nobel Prize for economics in 1998.

LYN SQUIRE was the first president of the Global Development Network. After gaining his Ph.D. from Cambridge University, he has spent his professional career at the World Bank. He has served as Chief Economist of the Middle East and North Africa Vice-Presidency, Director of the Research Department, and Director of the 1990 World Development Report on Poverty.

ISTVÁN GYÖRGY TÓTH is director of the Budapest-based TÁRKI Social Research Institute Inc., an independent applied social research company. He received his Ph.D. in Sociology in 2003 at Budapest Corvinus University, where he is also an adjunct professor. He has headed the Hungarian Household Panel Study and a number of other projects on income distribution and social policies. He has been consultant to various international organizations like the OECD and World Bank.

LORENZA MARTÍNEZ TRIGUEROS is a Senior Economist in the Research Department of Banco de México. Before joining the Central Bank of Mexico she worked at McKinsey and Co., and at the Ministry of Finance in Mexico. She holds a Ph.D. in economics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Her research topics include monetary policy in Mexico, financial markets and property rights, financial crises, wage differentials and international trade and the costs of inflation.

UMBERTO TRIULZI is Professor of Political Economy at Sapienza University in Rome, and Scientific Director of the Institute for Relations between Italy and the Countries of Africa, Latin America and the Middle East (IPALMO). He is an advisor to the Italian Ministry of Foreign Affairs and a member of the Advisory Board of the Center for Economic and Law of the Markets, at Sapienza University.