

Acknowledgments

This volume is the outcome of a truly collaborative effort undertaken by five units (Bocconi University, University of Bologna, University of Firenze, University of Modena and Reggio Emilia, and University of Siena) which put together the results of a research effort lasting for almost four years.

As editors of the book which summarizes the results of this research, and on behalf of the other participants to the project, we wish to acknowledge many colleagues and friends who enthusiastically provided their precious advice in order to improve the quality of this work.

The chapters which compose the book have been discussed in three preliminary workshops, hosted by the University of Bologna in June 2005 and September 2006 and by University of Modena and Reggio Emilia in February 2006. We owe a special and warm thanks to Vera Zamagni and Giuliano Muzzioli for their generous hospitality.

A final conference, open to the scientific community and hosted by the Bocconi University in June 2007 has involved many colleagues as discussants of the final version of the chapters. Margherita Balconi, Stefano Breschi, Giancarlo Cainarca, Giuseppe Conti, Marco Doria, Giovanni Federico, Emanuele Felice, Enrico Giovannetti, Sergio Mariotti, Mario Minoja, Luigi Orsenigo, Claudio Pavese, Francesco Silva, Andrea Sironi and Ercole Sori provided precious comments and invaluable help from which all the members of the research group greatly benefited.

The project has been possible thanks to the joint financial support of Bocconi University, Universities of Bologna, Firenze, Modena and Reggio Emilia, and Siena, together with the Italian Ministry of Education, University and Research (COFIN # 2004134099).

We express our gratitude to Franco Amatori, the scientific coordinator of the whole project, who has been constantly following the research's development and providing key support from both the scientific and the organizational point of view.

Special thanks go to Riccardo Benedetti for his excellent research assistance on Imita.db and other databases. The quality of this book has been enormously raised by the valuable and very patient language editing supplied by Chris Engert.

Andrea Colli & Michelangelo Vasta
Firenze and Varese, Summer 2009