
Contributors

Robert Bateman is an assistant professor teaching public administration, international business and human resource management at the American University of Sharjah. He has served in the US foreign service, on two city councils, and as mayor of a newly formed community. His consulting experience includes work with governments and businesses in more than 60 nations.

Anthony B.L. Cheung is President of the Hong Kong Institute of Education, with the concurrent title of Chair Professor of Public Administration. He writes extensively on privatization, public sector reforms, Hong Kong governance and Asian administrative reforms. His recent books are Governance and Public Sector Reform in Asia: Paradigm Shift or Business As Usual? (RoutledgeCurzon, 2003) and Public Service Reform in East Asia (Chinese University Press, 2005). Professor Cheung is active in public service. He is currently member of the Executive Council of Hong Kong and Chairman of the Hong Kong Consumer Council.

Jørgen Christensen is Professor in Public Administration at the Department of Political Science, University of Aarhus. His research covers Danish public administration, comparative administration, regulatory reform and administration, the impact of the European Union (EU) on national public policy and administration.

Tom Christensen is Professor in Public Administration and Organization Theory at Department of Political Science, University of Oslo, and Adjunct Professor at the Rokkan Centre, University of Bergen. Has worked over several decades with studies of central public administration and comparative public sector reform. Published extensively in a number of the most important international journals in the field. Of his latest books, where he is editor and author, could be mentioned: Autonomy and Regulation. Coping with Agencies in the Modern State (Elgar, 2006), Transcending New Public Management (Ashgate, 2007), Organization Theory and the Public Sector (Routledge, 2007).

Alistair Cole is Professor in European Politics at Cardiff University. He is Member of the French CNRS Political Science Committee (section 40), the executive committee of the GRALE (Groupement de recherche sur les administrations locales en Europe), Paris, and the (ESRC) Economic and Social Research Council's Politics, Economics and Geography College. He has published a number of books including François Mitterrand: A Study in Political Leadership (Routledge, 1997), and Governing and Governance in France (Cambridge University Press, 2008) as well as many articles in journals such as Comparative Political Studies, Regional Studies, International Journal of Urban and Regional Research and French Politics.

Guido Dierickx is Professor of Political Science at the University of Antwerp and has held a range of visiting positions. He has promoted, or participated, in research projects about 'The role of European Parliaments in Managing Social Conflict', 'The Political Culture of Senior Civil Servants', 'The Ideological Factor in Macro-Economic Policy Making', 'European and National Civil Servants. A study of their formal and informal networks of communication', 'Cultural Deprivation', 'Interest Groups and European Policy-making', 'The Implementation of EU Directives in Belgium' and 'Administrative Reform in Belgium' and has published widely on the subjects of political culture, ideology, participation and decision-making.

Brian Dollery is Professor of Economics and Director of the Centre for Local Government at the University of New England in Armidale, New South Wales, Australia. Professor Dollery has taught in universities in Australia, Japan, South Africa and the USA. Brian has published extensively in the area of local government reform inter alia The Political Economics of Local Government (Edward Elgar, 2001), Australian Local Government Economics (UNSW Press, 2006), Reform and Leadership in the Public Sector (Edward Elgar, 2007), Local Government Reform: A Comparative Analysis of Advanced Anglo-American Countries (Edward Elgar, 2008), Reshaping Australian Local Government: Finance, Governance and Reform (Peking University Press, 2008) (translated into Mandarin) and The Theory and Practice of Local Government Reform (Edward Elgar, 2008).

Robin Gauld is Associate Professor of Health Policy, Department of Preventive and Social Medicine, University of Otago, Dunedin, New Zealand. He has a master's degree in politics and public administration from Victoria University of Wellington and a PhD from the University of Hong Kong. His research interests are in comparative health policy, primary care reform and healthcare quality. In 2006–07, with Shaun Goldfinch, he conducted a series of studies into e-government in New Zealand. His articles have appeared in journals such as the British Medical Journal, Journal of Health Politics, Policy and Law, and Health Policy. His books include Revolving Doors: New Zealand's Health Reforms (2001), The Hong Kong Health Sector: Development and Change (2002, with Derek Gould), Comparative Health Policy in the Asia Pacific (2005, ed.), Dangerous Enthusiasms: E-Government, Computer Failure and Information Systems Development (2006, with Shaun Goldfinch) and the forthcoming The New Health Policy (2009, Open University Press).

Shaun F. Goldfinch is Associate Professor at Nottingham University Business School and was formerly a senior lecturer in the Department of Politics at the University of Otago, New Zealand and an associate professor in public administration at the American University of Sharjah. He is author of Remaking New Zealand and Australian Economic Policy (Georgetown University Press, 2000), and co-author of Dangerous Enthusiasms: E-Government, Computer Failure and Information Systems Development (Otago University Press, 2006) and Remaking the Tasman World (Canterbury University Press, 2008). Recent articles have appeared in Public Administration Review, Governance, Journal of Policy History, Journal of Sociology and Australian Journal of Politics and History.

Robert Gregory is Professor of Political Science in the School of Government, Victoria University of Wellington, New Zealand. He has published widely on public administration and state sector reform and public policy-making theory.

Glyn Jones is Head of Student Affairs Office in the Student Services and Administration department at Kingston University. His PhD completed in 2004 was on the effects of the 1989–97 administrative reforms on the French Ministries and field services. In addition to publications in this field, he has also written articles on student behaviour and complaints in higher education.

Per Læg Reid is Professor at the Department of Administration and Organization Theory, University of Bergen, and adjunct professor at the Rokkan Centre, University of Bergen. He has published numerous articles in international journals in the fields of public sector reform, institutional change, comparative public administration and central government. His latest books include Europeanization and Transnational States (Routledge 2004), Autonomy and Regulation. Coping with Agencies in the Modern State (Elgar 2006), Transcending New Public Management (Ashgate, 2007), Organization Theory and the Public Sector (Routledge, 2007).

Linda McLoughlin is the founder of LeadershipWorks – an Irish-based public management consultancy providing leadership and organization development in Ireland, the EU, South America and Africa. Linda conducts research into leadership styles among senior Irish public servants and has analysed the links between these management behaviours and the capacity to lead change and reform. She is co-author of the recently published Reform and Leadership in the Public Sector (Edward Elgar, 2007) and has written a number of articles on leadership for public administration journals.

Mirko Noordegraaf is a full professor of public management, at the University of Utrecht (Utrecht School of Governance). He focuses on public management reform, public managers, managerial work, and professionalism. Together with R.A.W. Rhodes and Paul 't Hart, he published Observing Government Elites. Up Close and Personal (Palgrave, 2007). He also published in journals such as Administration & Society, Public Administration, Public Management Review and Journal of Management Studies.

Bert A. Rockman is currently Professor and Head of the Department of Political Science at Purdue University. He was previously Director of the School of Public Policy and Management (now the John Glenn School of Public Affairs) at Ohio State University. He has also been University Professor at the University of Pittsburgh and a Senior Fellow in the Governmental Studies Program at the Brookings Institution in Washington. He has been a Fellow at the Swedish Collegium for Advanced Study in the Social Sciences (SCASS), a Visiting Professor at National Taipei University, Hebrew University, the University of Sao Paulo, and a Visiting Fellow at Nuffield College, Oxford. Rockman's areas of specialization are political leadership, especially the US Presidency), executive politics and bureaucracy, and political institutions. He has received the Neustadt Prize for best book on the US Presidency and has been the recipient of the Herbert A. Simon Award for 'significant contributions to the scientific study of bureaucracy'. He also served as an editor of the international journal Governance for eight years. His most recent books are Presidential Leadership: The Vortex of Power (Oxford) co-edited with Richard W. Waterman, and The George W. Bush Legacy (CQ Press) co-edited with Colin Campbell and Andrew Rudalevige, each published in 2008.

Marian Simms is Professor in Political Studies, and served as Chair of the Politics Department, University of Otago, New Zealand from 2002 to 2007. She also recently held a visiting fellowship in the Politics Program, Australian National University Canberra, where this chapter was written. She has recently published an article and a book on Australian and New Zealand politics: 'Australia and New Zealand: separate paths but path dependent', The Round Table, vol. 95, issue 387, 2006, pp. 679–92 and From the Hustings to Harbour Views; Electoral Administration in New South Wales, 1856–2006 University of NSW Press, Sydney 2006 (Distributed by University of Washington Press, USA). Her edited book Kevin07: The 2007 Australian Election was published in 2008.

Thierno Thiam is a PhD candidate at Purdue University specializing in International Politics with minors in Comparative Politics and Political Institutions and Behavior. He is currently working on a dissertation in which he attempts to measure the explanatory power of three major paradigms of International Politics (Liberalism, Constructivism and Realism) to explain the rise of African regional organizations.

Stephen Tomblin is a full professor in the Department of Political Science and Medicine (Community Health) at Memorial University of Newfoundland. He has published widely on the issue of regional integration. In 1995, he authored Ottawa and the Outer Provinces: The Challenges of Regional Integration in Canada, published by Lorimer Press. This year, he co-edited and contributed to Regionalism in a Global Society: Persistence and Change in Atlantic Canada and New England, published by Broadview Press. He has been a frequent media contributor and produced discussion papers for the Romanow Commission and the Newfoundland and Labrador Royal Commission on Renewing and Strengthening Our Place in Canada. He has benefited from participating in various collaborative/interdisciplinary research projects, each of which has a restructuring/regionalization component.

Joe L. Wallis is Professor of Economics and Public Administration at the School of Business and Management and Head of the Department of Management, Marketing and Public Administration at the American University of Sharjah. His research interests mainly focus on the political economy of reform, leadership and public sector economics. He has co-authored four books, the most recent being Reform and Leadership in the Public Sector (with Brian Dollery and Linda McLoughlin, Edward Elgar, 2007), and has written over 60 articles including some that have appeared in Public Administration, Governance, World Development and the Australian Journal of Political Science.

Marie-France Waxin is currently Associate Professor of Human Resource Management (HRM) at the School of Business and Management, American University of Sharjah, in the United Arab Emirates (UAE). She has earned a European PhD in International HRM at Aix-Marseille University, France in 2000. She researches and publishes in the areas of international, comparative, and strategic HRM. Currently, she focuses on the congruence between individual, organizational and cultural values. She teaches HRM, Strategic HRM and Organizational Behaviour (OB) in Undergraduate and MBA programmes. She worked and lived in France, Denmark, Germany, India, Canada, UAE.

Kai Wegrich is Professor for Public Management and teaches public management at the Hertie School of Governance in Berlin, Germany. He studied Political Science and Economics at Hamburg University and Free University Berlin and worked as Research Fellow at Humboldt University Berlin and Potsdam University. He completed his PhD in political science and public administration at the University of Potsdam in 2003. In 2005, he joined RAND Corporation as Senior Researcher, working in their Berlin and Cambridge offices. He also taught public policy and regulation at the Department of Government, London School of Economics during the academic year 2006/07.

Kiyoshi Yamamoto, PhD, is Professor of Financial Management at the Center for National University Finance and Management and the University of Tokyo. He has published widely on issues of financial management and public administration particularly as they relate to Japan.

