Acknowledgments

Research for this book has progressed over time through collaborations on journal articles and book chapters with Günseli Berik, Nidhiya Menon, Jane Miller, Bill Rodgers, Stephanie Seguino, Dara Woerdeman, and Joe Zveglich. Each of these persons provided invaluable comments and suggestions on this work at various stages of the research. Diane Elson and Sylvestre Gaudin also gave helpful feedback on specific questions that arose while writing the manuscript. Mayra Buvinic, Monica Das Gupta, Elizabeth King, Andrew Mason, and Daniel Mont at the World Bank, and Manuel Montes and Shahra Razavi at the United Nations, all played an important role in creating research opportunities about women’s employment that influenced how this book took shape. I am indebted to members of the International Association for Feminist Economics (IAFFE) who participated in conference sessions at which this research was presented, with special thanks to Caren Grown, Maria Floro, Ann Mari May, Gale Summerfield, and Diana Strassmann. A special acknowledgment goes to Diane Fay, Paige MacPherson, Lisa Pettit, and Maria Tattoli for the regular conversations we had about staying focused. Many thanks also to Erlinda Go from the United Nations Statistics Division for helpful information on time use, and Caitlyn McClelland for her careful proofreading of the entire manuscript. Alan Sturmer and Alexandra Mandzak provided outstanding guidance and editorial expertise. I am especially grateful to Bill Rodgers and our children for their support and patience during the writing process.
