Acknowledgements

There are many inspirational and supportive people who assisted with the development of this work.

Yousif Abdullah, to whom this book is dedicated, provided constant support and guidance. His faith and personal generosity enabled the initial contacts with leaders in government, diplomatic services, public agencies, industry and women’s development organizations from which this volume developed. He is sadly missed.

Thanks to Dr Lulwa Mutlaq for her support and commitment to women’s leadership development, both personally and as part of the Bahrain Management Society. Thanks also to Susan Kanani at the Institute of Productivity and Human Resource Development, IDRO, Tehran.

We would like to acknowledge the support of the current leaders at the Institute of Public Administration in Saudi Arabia and, in particular, we thank Dr Saeed al-Garni, Head of Research; Dr Hanan al-Mahdi, Director General of the Women’s Branch; and Khalid Baltal for their encouragement, critical insight and reflection on the process of writing about leadership. We are honoured to be involved with their scholarly deliberations on organization and human development issues in the region.

Also key in the development of this book are those colleagues who have supported this academic endeavour including Jawad Syed (University of Kent), Mustafa Özbilgin (Brunel University), Kate Hutchings (Griffith University) and Maged Botros (American University in Cairo).

To all those we have taught in Bahrain, Iran, Saudi Arabia, United Arab Emirates and Oman: we hope this book provides inspiration to examine Middle East leadership from a global perspective, and global leadership from a Middle Eastern perspective.

Finally, a note of appreciation to Tony Murfin for his work on the manuscript, his guidance, his support and encouragement: and as her husband, from Beverly, a personal note of love and thanks.

Dr Beverly Dawn Metcalfe and Dr Fouad Mimouni,
