Contributors

Professor Pranab Bardhan is Professor of Economics at University of California at Berkeley. He was educated at Presidency College, Calcutta and Cambridge University, UK, and has been the author of twelve books, twelve co-edited books, and more than 100 journal articles, primarily in the areas of economic development, international trade, political economy, and institutional economics. He was the Chief Editor of the Journal of Development Economics from 1985–2003. More details are available at http://emlab.berkeley.edu/users/webfac/bardhan/bardhan.htm.

Graciela Chichilnisky has worked extensively in the Kyoto Protocol process, creating and designing the carbon market concept that became international law in 2005. She also acted as a lead author of the Intergovernmental Panel on Climate Change, which received the 2007 Nobel Prize. A frequent keynote speaker, special adviser to several UN organizations and heads of state, her pioneering work uses innovative market mechanisms to reduce carbon emissions, conserve biodiversity and ecosystem services and improve the lot of the poor. Dr Chichilnisky is a Professor of Economics and Mathematical Statistics at Columbia University and the Sir Louis Matheson Distinguished Professor at Monash University. More details are available at www.chichilnisky.com.

Dr Patrick Emerton is a Lecturer in the Faculty of Law, Monash University. His areas of research include philosophy of language, political philosophy, and legal responses to political violence. His doctoral thesis, ‘Moral Relativism and Political Legitimacy: An argument for a global social contract’, argues that international political arrangements can be legitimate only if they respect and conform to the deep commitments of all who participate in them.

Dr Caroline E. Foster is a former adviser with the New Zealand Ministry of Foreign Affairs and Trade. Her interests lie in the fields of dispute settlement, trade, human rights, international environmental law, and the law of the sea, as well as Antarctica. She has published widely in international legal journals and her monograph on science, the precautionary principle, and the rules of evidence in international courts and tribunals will be published next year by Cambridge University Press.
Professor Robert Howse is the Lloyd C. Nelson Professor of International Law at New York University. He has also taught at the University of Michigan, Harvard, Tel Aviv, Toronto, Tsing Hua, and Paris (Sorbonne-Pantheon) Universities and is a regular instructor at the World Trade Institute, Berne. He is the author of, among other works, The Regulation of International Trade (with Michael Trebilcock), a contributor to the American Law Institute project on WTO Law, and series editor for Oxford University Press’s Commentaries on the WTO Treaties.

Professor Sarah Joseph is a Professor of Law at Monash University and the Director of the Castan Centre for Human Rights Law. She is the main author of the leading text, The International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights: Cases, Materials and Commentary (OUP, 2004). She has published on numerous topics, including corporations and human rights, freedom from torture, and Australian constitutional law. She is a lead investigator on two major grants funded by the Australian Research Council, on the WTO and Human Rights, and Multinational Corporations and Human Rights.

Professor David Kinley holds the Chair in Human Rights Law at the University of Sydney. He has previously held positions at universities in Australia, the UK and the US, and has lectured on human rights matters in many other countries. He is the author of many books and articles, the most recent of which is Civilising Globalisation: Human Rights and the Global Economy (CUP, 2009). He has worked for more than 15 years as a consultant and adviser on international and domestic human rights law, especially in Asia, with a variety of governments, corporations, NGOs and international bodies including the World Bank and the UN.

Dr Andrew T.F. Lang is a Senior Lecturer in the Law Department of the London School of Economics. He previously studied at the University of Sydney, and the University of Cambridge, where he received his PhD, and was then a Junior Research Fellow at Trinity Hall, Cambridge.

Dr Shervin Majlessi is a programme management officer at the United Nations Office on Drugs and Crime (UNODC – New York). Prior to joining UNODC he was an advisor on trade/globalization and good governance/corruption issues at the Office of the UN High Commissioner for Human Rights (OHCHR – Geneva). He has also worked as a consultant for the World Bank and as a deputy counselor for the Independent Inquiry Committee into the UN Oil-for-Food Programme (Volcker Committee).

Odette Murray is an LLM candidate at the University of Cambridge, specialising in international law. She holds a BA and LLB from the University of Sydney, graduating with first class honours. She was a member of the University of Sydney team which won the 2007 Phillip C. Jessup International Law Moot Court Competition in Washington, DC. She is a solicitor of the Supreme Court of NSW practicing in class action litigation at Maurice Blackburn Lawyers, and is an Affiliate of the Sydney Centre for International Law.

Hai Nguyen is a researcher at the Vietnamese Institute for Human Rights. Currently, she is a PhD student at the Law Faculty, The University of Sydney. She has published a number of articles on human rights issues in Vietnam.

Professor Ernst-Ulrich Petersmann is Professor of International and European Law and Head of the Law Department at the European University Institute (EUI) in Florence, Italy. He was previously Professor of International and European law at the University of Geneva, Switzerland, and its Graduate Institute of International Studies. During his 30 years of legal practice, Professor Petersmann represented Germany in various international organisations (EC, OECD, UN), acted as legal advisor to the GATT as well as legal consultant for the WTO, and participated in numerous GATT and WTO dispute settlement proceedings as legal advisor, member or chairman of dispute settlement panels.

Professor Hélène Ruiz Fabri has degrees in law and political science, a Doctorate in Law and is Agrégée des Facultés de droit (1990). She is currently Professor at the University of Paris I – Panthéon Sorbonne, Director of the Institute of Comparative Studies of Paris (UMR de droit comparé – Paris I/CNRS), Director of the Master 2 Degree Program in International Economic Law and President of the European Society of International Law. She teaches and researches International Law and she also got expertise notably at the French administration and at the Agence internationale de la Francophonie as a legal consultant on the cultural diversity.

Dr Kenneth C. Shadlen is a political scientist in the Development Studies Institute (DESTIN) at the London School of Economics and Political Science. His current research addresses the politics of intellectual property (IP), and the politics of North-South economic integration. He is the co-editor of The Politics of Intellectual Property: Contestation over the Ownership, Use, and Control of Knowledge and Information (Edward Elgar, 2009), and The Political Economy of Hemispheric Integration: Responding to Globalization in the Americas (Palgrave Macmillan, 2008). He is writing a book on the politics of IP, technology and innovation in Latin America.
Professor Ruti G. Teitel is the Ernst C. Stiefel Professor of Comparative Law at New York Law School. She has also taught in the School of International and Public Affairs at Columbia University and at Yale Law School, as a Senior Fellow at the Orville H. Schell Jr Center for International Human Rights. Her book, Transitional Justice (Oxford University Press, 2000), examines the 20th century transitions to democracy in many countries. She is a member of the Council on Foreign Relations, and is also on the Steering Committee of Human rights Watch Europe/Central Asia, as well as HRW’s Terrorism and Counter-Terrorism Steering committee.

Professor Chantal Thomas joined Cornell University in 2007 as Professor of Law, and has also taught at law faculties in Beijing, Cairo, London, Minneapolis, New York City, Paris and Suzhou. Professor Thomas focuses her scholarship on international trade and development, with emphasis on the relationships between international law, political economy, and global social justice. She is co-editor (with Joel Trachtman) of Developing Countries in the WTO Legal System (Oxford University Press, 2009).

Professor Jeff Waincymer is a Professor at the Faculty of Law, Monash University. He is the author of WTO Litigation: Procedural Aspects of Formal Dispute Settlement, and Australian Income Tax: Principles and Policy (2nd edn) and is a joint author of A Practical Guide to International Commercial Arbitration and also International Trade Law: Commentary and Materials (2nd edn). He is an Australian Government Nominee as a non-governmental panellist for the WTO and has acted as a panellist. He is also a nominated ICSID panellist.