Contributors

Maarten J. Arentsen is Associate Professor of Energy Policy at the School of Management and Governance and the Institute of Governance Studies at the University of Twente. His research focuses on energy policy and (green) energy innovation.

Michael Callon is professor at the Ecole des Mines, Paris, in the Centre for Sociology of Innovation. His recent work focuses on economics, including economics of innovation and the role of patient associations.

Gerhard C. Geerdink is an assistant professor at the University of Twente and Saxion University and Deputy Coordinator of the master track Management, Economics and Law at the University of Twente.

Pierre-Benoit Joly is senior social scientist at INRA (Institut National de Recherche Agronomique) in Paris. He has studied high-tech innovation in agriculture and, more generally, with attention to its embedding in society, including controversies. He is now also Director of IFRIS, the Ile-de-France Centre of Excellence for science and innovation studies.

Yoram Krozer is senior researcher at the University of Twente, affiliated scholar at the Technical University Delft and Honorary Fellow of the University of Melbourne. He studied biology, economics, business administration and received a doctorate from Groningen University. He is founder of the Cartesius Institute, Institute for Sustainable Innovations of the Netherlands Technical Universities. His present aim is to foster the European Academy for Sustainable Innovations.

Atle Midttun is professor at the Norwegian School of Management, Institute of Innovation and Economic Organization, Co-Director of the Centre for Energy and Environment, and Director of the Centre for Corporate Citizenship. His research contributions and teaching are within regulation and governance, energy, corporate social responsibility, innovation, strategy and economic organization.
Contributors

Nils-Otto Ørjasæter is Managing Director, Intro Management AS and part-time professor at the Norwegian School of Management in Oslo within the corporate entrepreneurship and innovation field.

Arie Rip is Emeritus Professor of Philosophy of Science and Technology at the University of Twente, The Netherlands. He continues to work on Constructive Technology Assessment of emerging technologies, trying to bridge the gap between innovation and ELSA (ethical, legal and social aspects).

Daniele Schiliro, BA is Associate Professor of Economics at the University of Messina, Department of Economics, Statistics and Mathematics (DESMaS) ‘Vilfredo Pareto’. He is also Researcher and Member of the Scientific Committee of the Centre of Research in Economic Analysis (CRANEC), Università Cattolica di Milano.

Peter J. Stauvermann is Professor of Economics at the Changwon National University in Changwon, Korea. He publishes and teaches in many fields of economics, such as growth theory, institutional economics, environmental economics, regional economics and conflict theory.

Albert E. (Bert) Steenge is Professor of Economics at the University of Groningen, The Netherlands. His field of interest is multi-sector analysis, including the institutional aspects involved in this type of approach. He has published widely in this field, and has served on the editorial board of several scientific journals.

Wouter van Rossum is Dean of the Faculty of Military Sciences, Netherlands Defence Academy, Breda, The Netherlands and Professor of Innovation, with special focus on Technology Dynamics, University of Twente, Enschede. His research focus is on the valuation of new emerging technologies, with a special interest in the relationships between supplier and customer firms.

Jan-Peter Voß is head of the Innovation in Governance Research Group at the Institute of Sociology and the Centre for Technology and Society (ZTG) of the Berlin Institute of Technology. His current research focuses on innovation in governance, energy and climate policy and special problems of governance for sustainable development.