

Contributors

Regine Barth is head of the Öko-Institut's Environmental Law and Governance Division and was the Coordinator of the RARE project. She has specialized in environmental and administrative law, both at German, EU and international level. Over the years she has carried out extensive interdisciplinary research on policy instruments including Corporate Social Responsibility (CSR). She regularly engages in participatory policy processes.

Maria Bohn is a Research Associate at the Stockholm Environment Institute, with its Policy and Institutions Research Programme.

Hajnalka Csáfor works as an Assistant Professor at the Department of Corporate Economics of Eszterhazy Karoly College in Eger, Hungary. She also works as a PhD student at the Budapest University of Technology and Economics (BUTE). Her main research interest is in CSR with a focus on developments in Europe and Hungary and also on regional aspects.

Mária Csete is a part-time Research Fellow at the Department of Environmental Economics, Budapest University of Technology and Economics (BUTE) and a full-time Research Fellow at the Adaptation to Climate Change Research Group of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences at the Budapest Corvinus University. Her research interests include regional and rural development, sustainable settlements, the socio-economic effects related to the mitigation of and the adaptation to climate change.

Miklós Füle is an Associate Professor at Budapest University of Technology and Economics (BUTE). His main research topics are environmental economics, specific small regional sustainable development scenarios and environmental aspects of bankruptcy proceedings.

Christian Hochfeld is Deputy Director of the Öko-Institut and Head of its Berlin office. He works with the Infrastructure and Enterprises Division. His main fields of research and consultancy are corporate sustainability strategies and CSR, sustainable product development and life cycle assessments.

Elin Lerum Boasson is a PhD student and a Research Fellow at the Fridtjof Nansen Institute. Her research interests are European and EU energy and climate politics, with specific attention to how the European developments affect Norwegian energy producers.

Noémi Csigéné Nagypál is a Research Fellow at the Department of Environmental Economics, Budapest University of Technology and Economics (BUTE). She graduated at BUTE as an engineering manager and has specialized in environmental management. Her research fields are monetary environmental valuation and CSR.

Daniele Nicolai is a Senior Researcher of the CSR and Sustainable Management Programme at the Fondazione Eni Enrico Mattei (FEEM). His research interests are in corporate governance, sustainability issues and CSR reporting. His main focus is on the energy and banking sectors.

Tamás Pálvölgyi is an Associate Professor at the Department of Environmental Management, Budapest University of Technology and Economics (BUTE). His research fields include climate change impact and adaptation in socio-economic systems. He has also experiences in researches related to environmental policy integration and sustainable development policies, as well as in the coordination of strategic environmental assessments.

Katharina Schmitt is a Research Fellow with the Environmental Law and Governance Division of the Öko-Institut. Her main area of research is CSR from a company, consumer and politics perspective, particularly in the area of food and retailing. She works on issues ranging from environmental protection to fair trade and social inclusion.

Irmgard Schultz holds a PhD in political science. She is a Senior Researcher and a co-founder of the Institute of Social-Ecological Research (ISOE) in Frankfurt/Main. She heads the research department 'Everyday Life Ecology and Consumption'. Her work focuses on approaches to conceptualizing the gender dimension in inter- and transdisciplinary sustainability research; everyday life ecology and sustainable development; and gender and environment.

Jon Birger Skjærseth is a senior researcher at the Fridtjof Nansen Institute. His research interests lie in the field of international, EU, national and corporate environmental policy, with main emphasis on climate change and marine pollution.

János Szlávik is a Professor and Head of the Department of Environmental Economics, Budapest University of Technology and Economics. His research interests are sustainable development and evaluation methods of environmental capital.

Federica Viganò holds a PhD in Philosophy and is a Senior Researcher in the CSR and Sustainable Management Programme at Fondazione Eni Enrico Mattei (FEEM). Her main interest is in CSR as a vehicle of wider social justice, wealth redistribution and democracy (systemic logic).

Jørgen Wettestad is a Senior Research Fellow and Programme Director at the Fridtjof Nansen Institute. His research interests are European and EU energy and environmental politics, with specific attention to the EU emissions trading system.

Peter Wilkinson is an independent consultant in corporate responsibility, specializing in countering corruption in the private sector. He is a Senior Advisor to Transparency International, the global coalition against corruption.

Franziska Wolff is a Research Fellow and project leader with the Environmental Law and Governance Division of the Öko-Institut. Her research interests are governance issues pertaining to sustainable businesses, a sustainable economy and natural resources, ranging from agriculture to fisheries and biodiversity.