For this book, I have relied on and quoted from the works of numerous other scholars. Among these works should be mentioned Henry J. Steiner and Philip Alston (eds.), International Human Rights in Context: Law, Politics, Morals (Oxford University Press, 2000 – second edition); Philip Alston (ed.), The EU and Human Rights (Oxford University Press, 1999); Gráinne de Búrca (ed.), EU Law and the Welfare State: In Search of Solidarity, (Oxford University Press, 2005); Michael D. Goldhaber, A People's History of the European Court of Human Rights (Rutgers University Press, 2007); Michael Ignatieff (ed.), American Exceptionalism and Human Rights (Princeton University Press, 2005); John F. Murphy, The United States and the Rule of Law in International Affairs (Cambridge University Press, 2004/2005); Geir Lundestad, The United States and Western Europe Since 1945: From 'Empire' by Invitation to Transatlantic Drift (Oxford University Press, 2003); and Anthony Pagden (ed.), The Idea of Europe: From Antiquity to the European Union (Woodrow Wilson Center Press & Cambridge University Press, 2002).

Parts of Chapters 1, 2 and 7 have been excerpted from my articles, 'From Pax Americana to Lex Americana: American Legal and Cultural Hegemony', in Fiona Macmillan (ed.), New Directions in Copyright Law, Volume 1, (Cheltenham, UK: Edward Elgar, 2005) and 'On European Narratives of Human Rights and Their Possible Implications for Copyright', in Fiona Macmillan (ed.), New Directions in Copyright Law, Volume 6 (Cheltenham, UK: Edward Elgar, 2007). I thank Fiona Macmillan for allowing me to use these excerpts in this context. Also, in Chapter 8, I use an excerpt from my introduction to Folkways and Law Ways: Law in American Studies which I edited for Odense University Press in 2001. I thank Editor Martin Lindø Westergaard for giving his permission for me to do so. Finally, the idea of pursuing a civil-law approach to law and humanities, which I outline in Chapter 8, first came up in connection with my review essay, in Law and Humanities, vol.1, issue 1 (Summer 2008) of Kieran Dolin, A Critical Introduction to Law and Literature. I thank Editor Gary Watt for permission to reuse that idea and a couple of my paragraphs from this review essay here.

I furthermore wish to thank the following colleagues and friends who have been kind enough to read through and offer comments on some of my chapters: Mark Gibney, Ida Elisabeth Koch, Stéphanie Lagoutte, Dorte Sindbjerg Martinsen, Morten Rosenmeier, Karen-Margrethe Simonsen, Stina Teilmann, Manuela Thurner, Kim Treiger-Bar-Am. Needless to say, whatever mistakes might still remain are my own – and not their – responsibility.

Special thanks are due to the Council of Europe (Publishing Division) for granting me permission to use the photo of the copy of the Magna Carta – donated to the Council of Europe by Great Britain – as the cover illustration for this book.

And finally, special thanks are due to my husband Matthias Mann as well as to our son Sebastian Porsdam Mann. It is a wonder how they find the patience to deal with their wife and mother, respectively, when she is heavily into her research and writing!
