As editors, we are grateful for the contribution of all project participants who not only shared their ideas, but were also willing to spend many days in writing them up in an easily accessible way. We are very thankful to the European Commission for their financial support. European integration of research would remain a dream without material support. Special thanks go to Richard Tol and Ray Kopp who offered us challenging and sometimes provoking thoughts that helped us shape our own ideas and research plans. We hope this book will prove a valuable contribution to policy-makers who want to understand what researchers can do, cannot do, and should not want to do with their models, and to researchers who work on the modelling of sustainability policies.
