
Contributors

Barry E. Adler is the Bernard Petrie Professor of Law and Business and Associate Dean for Information Systems and Technology at the New York University School of Law, where he teaches in the areas of bankruptcy, contracts, corporate finance, and corporations. His numerous publications in these areas include Foundations of Bankruptcy Law (Foundation Press, 2005) and Bankruptcy: Cases, Problems, and Materials (co-authored with Douglas Baird and Thomas Jackson, 4th edn, Foundation Press, 2007).

Lee J. Alston is Professor of Economics and Director of the Environment and Society Program in the Institute of Behavioral Science at the University of Colorado at Boulder. Alston is also a Research Associate at the National Bureau of Economic Research. He has published numerous articles on historical and contemporary institutions with a focus on the United States and Brazil, as well as Southern Paternalism and the American Welfare State: Economics, Politics, and Institutions in the South, 1865–1965 (co-authored with Joseph P. Ferrie, Cambridge University Press, 1999), Titles, Conflict, and Land Use: The Development of Property Rights and Land Reform on the Brazilian Amazon Frontier (co-authored with Gary D. Libecap and Bernardo Mueller, University of Michigan Press, 1999), and Empirical Studies in Institutional Change (co-edited with Thráinn Eggertsson and Douglass North, Cambridge University Press, 1996).

Benito Arruñada is Professor of Business Organization at Pompeu Fabra University and Barcelona GSE, where he teaches in the areas of organizations and markets, business economics and policy, and law and economics. He has published numerous articles and books on contracting, property rights, and organizations, including The Economics of Audit Quality (Springer, 1999), Corporate Governance and Regulation (Alianza, 1990), Contractual Theory of the Firm (Marcial Pons, 1998), and The Economics of the Firm: A Contractual Approach (Ariel, 1990).

Kenneth Ayotte is a Professor of Law at the Northwestern University School of Law. He was the recipient of the Dean's Award For Teaching Excellence in a Core Course (Corporate Finance) as an Assistant Professor of Finance and Economics at the Columbia Business School. He has taught and published in bankruptcy, corporate finance, and the economics of property law and legal entities.

Patrick Bolton is the Barbara and David Zalaznick Professor of Business, Finance, and Economics at Columbia Business School and a Research Fellow at the National Bureau of Economic Research. His teaching and research areas of interest are in contract theory and contracting issues in corporate finance and industrial organization. His publications in these areas include Contract Theory (co-authored with Mathias Dewatripont, MIT Press, 2005) and Credit Markets for the Poor (co-authored with Howard Rosenthal, Russell Sage Foundation, 2005).

Lee Anne Fennell is a Professor of Law at the University of Chicago Law School, where she teaches in the areas of property, land use, fair housing, local government, and torts. She has published widely in these areas and is the author of The Unbounded Home: Property Values Beyond Property Lines (Yale University Press, 2009).

William A. Fischel is a Professor of Economics and the Robert C. 1925 and Hilda Hardy Professor of Legal Studies at Dartmouth College, where he teaches a variety of courses in economics and law and economics. His numerous publications on regulatory takings and the economics of local government include Making the Grade: The Economic Evolution of American School Districts (University of Chicago Press, 2009); The Homevoter Hypothesis: How Home Values Influence Local Government Taxation, School Finance, and Land-Use Policies (Harvard University Press, 2001); Regulatory Takings: Law, Economics, and Politics (Harvard University Press, 1995); The Economics of Zoning Laws: A Property Rights Approach to American Land Use Controls (Johns Hopkins University Press, 1985).

Edwyna Harris is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Economics at Monash University, where she teaches in the areas of environmental economics and economic history. Her research focuses on historical and contemporary institutions used to price and allocate water within Australia, particularly around the Murray River, and their efficiency implications.

Michael A. Heller is the Lawrence A. Wien Professor of Real Estate Law at Columbia Law School, where he teaches property, land use, and real estate law, and has served as the school's vice dean for intellectual life. He is the author of The Gridlock Economy (Basic Books, 2008) and co-editor with Merritt Fox of Corporate Governance Lessons from Transition Economy Reforms (Princeton University Press, 2006).

Keith N. Hylton is The Honorable Paul J. Liacos Professor of Law at the Boston University School of Law, where he teaches in the areas of law and economics; litigation theory; antitrust; labor and employment; and corporate law. He has published numerous articles in American law journals and peer-reviewed law and economics journals, as well as Antitrust Law: Economic Theory and Common Law Evolution (Cambridge University Press, 2003).

Daniel B. Kelly is an Associate Professor of Law and the Robert and Marion Short Scholar at the University of Notre Dame Law School. His research and teaching interests include property, land use, and natural resources law, as well as trusts and estates. His publications focus on the law and economics of takings and eminent domain.

Gary D. Libecap is Donald Bren Distinguished Professor of Corporate Environmental Management in the Donald Bren School of Environmental Science & Management and Professor of Economics at the University of California, Santa Barbara, a Research Associate at the National Bureau of Economic Research, and the Sherm and Marge Telleen Research Fellow at the Hoover Institution, Stanford University. He has taught courses and published numerous articles and books on property rights and the tragedy of the commons, including Owens Valley Revisited: A Reassessment of the West's First Great Water Transfer (Stanford University Press, 2007); Titles, Conflict, and Land Use: The Development of Property Rights and Land Reform on the Brazilian Amazon Frontier (co-authored with Lee J. Alston and Bernardo Mueller, University of Michigan Press, 1999); The Federal Civil Service System and the Problem of Bureaucracy: The Economics and Politics of Institutional Change (co-authored with R.N. Johnson, University of Chicago Press and NBER, 1994); and Contracting for Property Rights (Cambridge University Press, 1989).

Dean Lueck is Bartley P. Cardon Professor in the Department of Agricultural & Resource Economics, Professor of Economics (by courtesy), Professor of Law (by courtesy), and Co-Director of the Program on Economics, Law, and the Environment at the University of Arizona. He has taught courses and published widely on property rights, environmental economics, and the law and economics of natural resources, and is co-author with Douglas W. Allen of The Nature of the Farm (MIT Press, 2003).

Thomas W. Merrill is the Charles Evans Hughes Professor of Law at Columbia Law School. He has taught courses and published numerous articles in the areas of property, environmental law, administrative law, eminent domain, and the U.S. Supreme Court, as well as Property (Oxford Introductions to U.S. Law) (co-authored with Henry E. Smith, Oxford University Press, 2010), Property: Principles and Policies (co-authored with Henry E. Smith, Foundation Press, 2007), and Property: Takings (co-authored with David Dana, Foundation Press, 2002).

Bernardo Mueller is a lecturer in the Department of Economics at the University of Brasilia, where he has taught courses on Positive Political Theory of Regulation, Econometrics, Environmental Economics, and Brazilian Economic History. He writes on Positive Political Theory and Regulation, New Institutional Economics, and Environmental Economics, and is a co-author with Lee J. Alston and Gary D. Libecap of Titles, Conflict, and Land Use: The Development of Property Rights and Land Reform on the Brazilian Amazon Frontier (University of Michigan Press, 1999).

Carol M. Rose is the Ashby Lohse Professor of Water and Natural Resource Law at the University of Arizona College of Law and the Gordon Bradford Tweedy Professor Emeritus of Law and Organization and Professorial Lecturer in Law at Yale Law School. She teaches property, land use, environmental law, natural resources law, and intellectual property law. Her numerous publications include Perspectives on Property Law (co-edited with Robert C. Ellickson and Bruce A. Ackerman, 3rd edn, Aspen, 2000) and Property and Persuasion: Essays on the History, Theory and Rhetoric of Ownership (Westview, 1994).

Henry E. Smith is the Fessenden Professor of Law at Harvard Law School, where he also directs the Project on the Foundations of Private Law, and teaches in the areas of property, intellectual property, natural resources, remedies, taxation, law and cognitive science, and law and economics. He has written widely in these areas, including Property (Oxford Introductions to U.S. Law) (co-authored with Thomas W. Merrill, Oxford University Press, 2010), Property: Principles and Policies (co-authored with Thomas W. Merrill, Foundation Press, 2007) and Restrictiveness in Case Theory (Cambridge Studies in Linguistics 78, Cambridge University Press, 1996).

Lior Jacob Strahilevitz is Deputy Dean, Professor of Law, and Walter Mander Teaching Scholar at the University of Chicago Law School, where he teaches courses on property, privacy, and intellectual property. His extensive writings in these areas include a book, Information and Exclusion, which is being published in 2010 by Yale University Press.

George Triantis is the Eli Goldston Professor at Harvard Law School, where he teaches and writes in the areas of bankruptcy, commercial transactions, contracts, and corporate finance. His recent publications include Foundations of Commercial Law (co-edited with Robert E. Scott, Foundation Press, 2009).

Martin Zelder is a Senior Lecturer in the Department of Economics at Northwestern University. He has published articles and book chapters in the areas of: the economics of the family (divorce, sex, love), law and economics (the Coase Theorem, penalizing academic fraud), and health economics (the implications of increased public health spending). He has held previous academic appointments at the University of Chicago, Australian National University, and the College of William and Mary.