Acknowledgments

This book grew out of Dr Duane Baumann’s vision for an interdisciplinary graduate program in integrated water resources planning and management. He conceived the outline, negotiated with the authors, and organized support for the effort from the Institute for Water Resources of the US Army Corps of Engineers (IWR). Those authors, all notables in the field, put considerable effort into their respective contributions and were extraordinarily cooperative with the editor when he suggested changes to those contributions.

The support from IWR included early face-to-face meetings, which were very helpful in drawing attention to areas that were potentially contentious and therefore worth extra thought. At the end of the writing and editing IWR went through the process of finding and negotiating with a publisher, not the easiest of tasks with a fairly specialized volume, and the authors and editors are grateful to Edward Elgar for persevering. Further, IWR arranged for technical support through CDM, and Ms Eva Opitz and Ms Paula Vukadinovich provided this. Ms Opitz was involved from the earliest stages of the manuscript’s development, coordinating with the authors, editors, staff and with IWR and conducting numerous reviews to ensure that the manuscript would meet the exacting standards of the publisher. Ms Vukadinovich demonstrated extreme patience and attention to detail in the development and processing of the several iterations of the manuscript. Those at IWR primarily responsible for the project were Dr Paul Bourget, Mr Robert Pietrowsky and Mr Darrell Nolton, and of these Dr Bourget can fairly lay claim to being the godfather of the final product.

Formally, the book project has been completed under IWR contract with CDM (DACW72-00-D-0001, Task order 56; W912HQ-04-D-0007, Task order 58). However, the views, opinions and findings contained in this publication are those of the authors and should not be construed as an official Department of the Army position, policy or decision, unless so designated by other official documentation.