

Acknowledgements

There are a number of people who have provided invaluable assistance to the authors in the preparation of this book. First and foremost is Dr Maria Salazar, who was a graduate student at George Mason University working with Roger Stough. She collaborated with the authors as a research assistant and prepared much of the material for the case studies in the chapters in Part II of this book. She also co-authored several papers that were written by the authors while undertaking the research which led to the development of the new theoretical framework for conceptualizing regional endogenous growth and development on which the chapters in Part I are based. Alistair Robson, a former graduate student at the University of Queensland who worked with Robert Stimson, also contributed to the research on which the chapters in Part I draw. Secondly, we wish to thank Ginta Palubinskas in the School of Public Policy at George Mason University who drafted the initial version of the case study on Tampera, Finland and Tracey Johnstone in the UQ Social Research Center at the University of Queensland who worked with the authors to help prepare the text and diagrams for publication.

The authors wish to acknowledge the financial support of the Australian Research Council Linkage International Scheme (grant #LX0346785) and the George Mason University Foundation for a research project on 'Regional Economic Development and Performance: Roles of leadership and Institutional Factors in Endogenous Growth' which forms the basis of this book.
