Contributors

Zoltan J. Acs is University Professor at the School of Public Policy and Director of the Center for Entrepreneurship and Public Policy at George Mason University (USA). His research interests are in entrepreneurship and innovation, global and domestic business environment, managerial economics and public policy, new venture creation, technology management, and the global economic environment. He is founding editor of the Small Business Economics Journal.

Philippe Aghion is Robert C. Waggoner Professor of Economics at Harvard University, USA. His main research work is on growth and contract theory. With Peter Howitt, he developed the so-called Schumpeterian Paradigm, and extended the paradigm in several directions.

David B. Audretsch is Distinguished Professor, Ameritech Chair of Economic Development, and Director of the Institute for Development Strategies at Indiana University, Bloomington, USA, Honorary Professor at WHU, Germany, and Visiting Professor at King Saud University, Saudi Arabia. His research focuses on the links between entrepreneurship, government policy, innovation, economic development and global competitiveness. He is founding editor of the Small Business Economics Journal.

Gil Avnimelech is a faculty member at Ono Academic College, Israel. Previously, he worked with Professor Maryann Feldman as a postdoctoral research associate at the Public Policy Department, UNC-CH. He conducted his PhD at the School of Management, Ben Gurion University. His fields of interest are entrepreneurship venture capital, innovative cluster development and innovation policy. He also lectures at the Business Schools of Tel Aviv University and Ben Gurion University.

William J. Baumol is the Harold Price Professor of Entrepreneurship and Academic Director of the Berkley Center for Entrepreneurship and Innovation in the Stern School of Business at New York University (USA); and Senior Economist and Professor Emeritus at Princeton University, USA. He is the author of more than 45 books, which have been translated into a dozen languages. His honors and awards include 12 honorary degrees and membership in the US National Academy of Sciences, the American Philosophical Society, the Accademia Nazionale Dei Lincei (Italy) and the British Academy.

Werner Bönte is Professor of Industrial Organization of the Schumpeter School of Business and Economics at the University of Wuppertal, Germany. He received a PhD from the University of Hamburg, Germany. His primary research interests are the economics of innovation, industrial organization, entrepreneurship and the economic performance of regions.

Pontus Braunerhjelm is Leif Lundblad’s Chair in International Business and Entrepreneurship, The Royal Institute of Technology, Stockholm, Sweden. One strand of his research is on industrial dynamics, cluster analysis, entrepreneurship and the ‘knowledge’ economy. A second strand of research is on international economics, with an emphasis on economic geography, foreign direct investment (FDI), agglomeration and spatial patterns.

Uwe Cantner is Professor of Economics of the Department of Economics of the Friedrich Schiller University Jena, Germany, and Professor of Economics at the Department of Marketing and Management of the University of Southern Denmark at Odense; he is also Director of the DFG doctoral program ‘The Economics of Innovative Change’ and Director of the Jena Graduate School ‘Human Behavior in Social and Economic Change’. He received a PhD from the Ludwig Maximilians University, Munich, Germany. His research interests are the economics of innovation, evolutionary economics, industrial economics and productivity analysis. He is editor of the Journal of Evolutionary Economics.

Bo Carlsson is Professor of Economics at the Weatherhead School of Management, Case Western Reserve University, USA. His research focuses on industrial dynamics, especially the nature and role of innovation systems and entrepreneurship in economic growth; the formation of industry clusters; intellectual property management and technology transfer.

Marcus Dejardin is Assistant Professor at Université Catholique de Louvain and FUNDP-University of Namur (Belgium). He is Invited Assistant Professor at Erasmus School of Economics, Rotterdam, the Netherlands and Université de Caen-Basse Normandie, France. He holds a PhD in economics from FUNDP-University of Namur. He is associate editor of Small Business Economics. His research explores the inter-relationships between entrepreneurship and regional economic development. He has developed expertise in entrepreneurship, industrial organization – market structures, macroeconomics, and in spatial and regional economics.

Gilles Duranton holds the Noranda Chair in Economics and International Trade in the Department of Economics at the University of Toronto, Canada. He obtained his PhD in economics jointly from the London School of Economics and the École des hautes études en sciences sociales in Paris. His research interests are both theoretical and empirical, including modelling of urban systems, the scope and micro-foundations of agglomeration economies, traffic congestion and the impacts of local public policies.

Andreas Eisingerich is Assistant Professor in Marketing at Imperial College Business School, London, UK. He holds a PhD from the University of Cambridge, Judge Business School. His research focuses on brand management, consumer behavior and service innovation.

Oliver Falck is Senior Researcher in the Ifo Institute for Economic Research at the University of Munich, Germany. He received a PhD from the Technical University of Freiberg, Germany. His research interests include entrepreneurship, innovation, human capital and urban economics.

Maryann P. Feldman is the S.K. Heninger Distinguished Chair in Public Policy at the University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, USA. Her work focuses on the ways in which universities transfer technology and the implications for economic development.
She explores the means by which geographic clusters produce economic growth and has special expertise in university-generated technologies and the commercialization of academic research.

Kathy Fogel is Assistant Professor of Finance at the Sam M. Walton College of Business, University of Arkansas, USA. Her research focuses on corporate finance, international corporate governance and entrepreneurial finance.

Michael Fritsch is Professor of Economics and Chair of Business Dynamics, Innovation, and Economic Change at the Friedrich Schiller University Jena, Germany. He is also Research Professor at the German Institute for Economic Research (DIW-Berlin) and at the Max-Planck Institute for Economics, Jena. His main fields of research are entrepreneurship and new business formation, innovation systems and economic development strategies. He received his PhD from the Technical University of Berlin, Germany.

Robert Gold is Graduate Student at the Max Planck Institute of Economics, Germany. He received an MA in political science from the University of Passau. His research interests include regional development and institutional influences on entrepreneurship.

Marco Guerzoni is Assistant Professor at the Department of Economics of the University of Jena, Germany. He received a PhD from the University of Milan, Italy. His research interest are the economics and management of innovation, entrepreneurship, industrial dynamics and competition, and the economics and management of knowledge and information.

Dietmar Harhoff is Professor of Business Administration at the Ludwig-Maximilian University (LMU) Munich, Germany. He is the Director of the Institute of Innovation Research, Technology Management and Entrepreneurship and a co-director of the LMU Entrepreneurship Center. His research focuses on issues in innovation, entrepreneurship, industrial economics and technology management.

Stephan Heblich is Lecturer in the Economics Division in the School of Management, University of Stirling, UK. He received a PhD in economics from the University of Passau, Germany. His fields of specialization are urban economics, entrepreneurship and innovation.

Richard A. Jensen is Professor and Chairperson of the Department of Economics at the University of Notre Dame, USA. He received a PhD from Northwestern University. His fields of specialization are microeconomic theory, industrial organization, and university invention and technology transfer.

Max Keilbach was a Senior Researcher at the Max Planck Institute of Economics in Jena, Germany, from 2004 to 2007. His main research interests were in the area of innovative entrepreneurship and its economic impact using empirical, econometric and simulation-based approaches. Between 1998 and 2002 he worked as a Senior Researcher at the Department of Industrial Economics at the Centre for European Economic Research (ZEW) in Mannheim, Germany. There his research was on the causes and impact of the demography of firms and on the development of corresponding databases.
Contributors

William R. Kerr is Associate Professor at the Harvard Business School, USA. His research focuses on entrepreneurship and innovation. One research strand considers agglomeration and entrepreneurship, with special interest in how government policies aid or hinder the entry of new firms and cluster formation. A second research strand examines the role of immigrant scientists and entrepreneurs in US technology development and commercialization, as well as the subsequent diffusion of new innovations to the immigrants’ home countries. A final interest area is entrepreneurial finance and angel investments.

Israel M. Kirzner is Emeritus Professor of Economics at New York University, USA. He is a leading economist in the tradition of the Austrian School and a leading authority on Ludwig von Mises’s thinking and methodology in economics. Kirzner’s major work is in the economics of entrepreneurship and ethics and economics.

Alfred Kleinknecht is Professor in the Economics of Innovation at TU Delft, the Netherlands. He obtained a PhD in economics at the Free University of Amsterdam, the Netherlands. He belonged to the team that developed the Community Innovation Survey (CIS) that became part of the standard data collection program in statistical agencies all over the European Union. He also contributed to the OECD Oslo Manual on innovation measurement.

Tobias Kretschmer is Professor of Strategy, Technology and Organization at the University of Munich, Germany. He is also Head of the Department Industrial Organization and New Technologies at the Ifo Institute for Economic Research. He received a PhD from London Business School. His main research interests are empirical industrial organization, organization design and strategy.

Kevin Lee is Assistant Professor of Finance and the Coordinator of the International Business concentration at the Craig School of Business at the California State University, Fresno starting August 2011. His dissertation focuses on formal and informal institutions and their impact on firm performance and economic outcomes.

Albert N. Link is Professor of Economics in the Department of Economics at the University of North Carolina, Greensboro, USA. His areas of expertise include science and innovation policy and the economics of entrepreneurship, and he is the editor of the Journal of Technology Transfer. He received a PhD from Tulane.

William McCumber is a PhD student at the Department of Finance at the Sam M. Walton College of Business, University of Arkansas (USA). As a former practitioner of asset management, McCumber has research interests that include financial institutions, corporate finance, asset pricing and the impact of institutions on economic decision-making.

Ramana Nanda is Assistant Professor at the Harvard Business School, USA. His research focuses on the ways in which the financial sector impacts innovation and entrepreneurship in the economy. One strand of research examines the role of financial intermediaries such as banks and VC's (venture capital firms) in shaping the founding and growth of new ventures in a region. A second, related strand, examines how government policy towards the financial sector impacts innovation, entrepreneurship and productivity growth in the economy.
Nicos Nicolaou is Lecturer in Management at the Department of Public and Business Administration at the University of Cyprus and a Visiting Fellow at the Innovation & Entrepreneurship Group, Imperial College Business School, London. His research interests include entrepreneurship, behavioral genetics, innovation management and university spinouts. He received a PhD from Imperial College London.

Bart Nooteboom is Professor of Innovation Policy at Tilburg University, the Netherlands. His current research interests are Schumpeterian and evolutionary economics, institutional economics, industrial/innovation/technology policy, innovation systems, trust within and between organizations, and learning within and between organizations.

Gerben van der Panne defended a PhD on regional knowledge spillovers in 2004. Since then he has been Assistant Professor in Management Economics at TU Delft, the Netherlands.

Simon C. Parker is Associate Professor of Entrepreneurship at the Richard Ivey School of Business, University of Western Ontario, Canada. He received a PhD from the University of Durham. His primary research interests are in the field of the economics of entrepreneurship.

Gabriele Pellegrino is Graduate Student of the Department of Economics and Social Sciences at the Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, in Italy. Gabriele’s main field of specialization is the economics of innovation.

Mariacristina Piva, PhD in economics, is Associate Professor of Economic Policy at the Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Italy. Her main field of specialization is the economics of innovation.

Mirjam van Praag is Professor of Entrepreneurship and Organization at the Faculty of Economics and Business of the Universiteit van Amsterdam (UvA), the Netherlands. She is also the founding director of the Amsterdam Center for Entrepreneurship (ACE). Mirjam van Praag’s research is in the field of entrepreneurship and organization.

Susanne Prantl is a Senior Research Fellow at the Max Planck Institute for Research on Collective Goods in Bonn, Germany. Her main research areas are industrial economics and applied econometrics. In her recent work she has considered the relationship between economic performance and institutions, public policy as well as regulation, focusing on firm entry, product market competition and innovation.

Charles F. Sabel is the Maurice T. Moore Professor of Law and Social Science at Columbia Law School, USA. His research centers on public innovations, European Union governance, labor standards, economic development and ultra-robust networks. His 1984 book, The Second Industrial Divide: Possibilities for Prosperity (Basic Books), co-written with Michael J. Piore, has been widely influential among labor scholars.

AnnaLee Saxenian is Professor and Dean of the University of California (USA) Berkeley’s School of Information and has a joint faculty appointment with the Department of City and Regional Planning. She has made a career of studying regional economics and the conditions under which people, ideas and geographies combine and connect into hubs of economic activity. She is author of two books about Silicon Valley: Regional Scott Shane is the A. Malachi Mixon III Professor of Entrepreneurial Studies in the Department of Economics at the Weatherhead School of Management at Case Western Reserve University, Cleveland, Ohio, USA. He received a PhD from the University of Pennsylvania.

Donald S. Siegel is Professor and Dean of the School of Business at the University at Albany, SUNY, USA. He received his PhD from Columbia University. He is the incoming co-editor of Academy of Management Perspectives and editor of the Journal of Technology Transfer. Don has published 92 articles and six books on issues relating to university technology transfer and entrepreneurship, the effects of corporate governance on economic performance, productivity analysis, and corporate social responsibility in leading journals in economics, finance, and management. His most recent books are Innovation, Entrepreneurship, and Technological Change (Oxford University Press) and the Handbook of Corporate Social Responsibility (Oxford University Press).

Daniel F. Spulber is the Elinor Hobbs Distinguished Professor of International Business and Professor of Management Strategy at the Kellogg School of Management, Northwestern University, USA. He received his PhD from Northwestern University. He is the founding editor of the Journal of Economics & Management Strategy.

Erik Stam is Associate Professor of Innovation and Organizational Economics at Utrecht University, the Netherlands. He is also Research Fellow at the University of Cambridge, UK, and Research Fellow at the Scientific Council for Government Policy, the Netherlands. His primary research interests are entrepreneurship, innovation and economic development.

Marco Vivarelli, PhD in economics and PhD in science and technology policy, is Full Professor of Economic Policy at the Università Cattolica del Sacro Cuore, Italy; he is Research Fellow at the Institute for the Study of Labor (IZA, Bonn), and at the Centre for the Study of Globalisation and Regionalisation (CSGR, Warwick University). He is associate editor of Small Business Economics and associate editor of Industrial and Corporate Change. His main field of specialization is the economics of innovation.

Charles W. Wessner is Director of the Program on Technology, Innovation and Entrepreneurship at the National Academy of Sciences, USA. His fields of specialization are innovation policy, including public–private partnerships, entrepreneurship, early-stage financing for new firms, and the special needs and benefits of high-technology industry. He received a PhD from the Fletcher School of Law and Diplomacy.