

Contents

List of figures	vii
List of tables	viii
List of contributors	ix
Preface	xi
1 Rethinking theories on social movements and development Shinichi Shigetomi	1
PART I RESOURCE AND INSTITUTIONAL ENDOWMENT FOR MOBILIZATION
2 Community-based local development and the peace initiative of the PDPMM in Colombia: resource mobilization under extreme conditions Noriko Hataya	19
3 Institutional readiness and resource dependence of social movements: the case of provincial development forums in Thailand Shinichi Shigetomi	51
PART II STRUCTURE BEHIND POLITICAL OPPORTUNITIES
4 Strategies for fragmentary opportunities and limited resources: the environmental protest movement under communist China in transition Kenji Otsuka	79
5 Institutional conditions for social movements to engage in formal politics: the case of AIDS activism in post-apartheid South Africa Kumiko Makino	110
6 Rethinking political opportunity structure in the Argentine unemployed and poor people's movement Koichi Usami	134

PART III HISTORY AND REALITY FOR FRAME- AND IDENTITY-MAKING

- 7 Dynamics of ideal values and social movement in a corporatist state: Mexican indigenous peoples' movements and a village's challenge 159
Akio Yonemura
- 8 Competition and framing in the women's movement in India 183
Mayumi Murayama
- 9 Opposition movements and the youth in Nigeria's
oil-producing area: an inquiry into framing 206
Katsuya Mochizuki

PART IV CONCLUSION

- 10 Resources, organizations and institutions: intermediaries for social movements in the development context 227
Kumiko Makino and Shinichi Shigetomi
- Index* 235