Contributors

Catrin Andersson is a Research Fellow at Stockholm Centre for Organizational Research (Score). Her research interests include public administration, public management policy, accountability, responsibility and democratic control. She has conducted empirical research in a historical perspective on the organization of the Swedish Public Administration.

Karin Fernler is Assistant Professor at Stockholm School of Economics. Her present research is focused on the role of knowledge in decision-making processes at different sites and levels within the healthcare sector. She has previously studied the practice of exercising management by knowledge through the formulation of rules and guidelines. Fernler is an appointed member to the Swedish Government’s Committee on Social Affairs.

Staffan Furusten is Associate Professor in Management at Stockholm School of Economics and is currently Director of Stockholm Centre for Organizational Research (Score). His research focuses on the production, diffusion, consumption and standardization of management knowledge, the standardization of organizational forms, the construction of markets and regulation, and professionalization of new forms of expertise. In addition to a number of articles, books and book chapters in these areas in English and Swedish, he has recently published a textbook in Swedish about the institutional environment (Den institutionella omvärlden, Liber 2007).

Ebba Sjögren is a Research Fellow at Stockholm Centre for Organizational Research (Score) and the Stockholm School of Economics. Her primary research interest is the role of knowledge in organizational decision making, particularly in the healthcare sector. Sjögren is published in The Sociological Review, Public Management Review and Journal of Healthcare Organisation and Management.

Linda Soneryd is Associate Professor in Sociology at Stockholm University and Senior Research Fellow at Stockholm Centre for Organizational Research (Score). Her research focuses on the organization of public consultation processes and risk regulation and the role of knowledge and participation in the areas of nuclear waste management, mobile telephony and GM crops.
Soneryd has published in such journals as Public Understanding of Science and Science, Technology & Human Values.

Adrienne Sörbom is Senior Research Fellow and Assistant Professor in Sociology at Stockholm Centre for Organizational Research (Score). Her research interests are connected to political sociology, mainly in the areas of political commitments, youth policy and the globalization of politics. She has conducted empirical research on social movements, new forms of political participation and environmental concerns.

Göran Sundström is Associate Professor in Political Science at Stockholm University and Senior Research Fellow at Stockholm Centre for Organizational Research (Score) and the Institute of Contemporary History at Södertörn University. His current research is on public management policy, the Europeanization of nation states, the development of core executives, and the role of civil servants in a transformed state.

Kristina Tamm Hallström is Research Fellow at Stockholm Centre for Organizational Research (Score) and Assistant Professor in Management at the Stockholm School of Economics. Her research interests include issues such as legitimacy, authority and power in international standardization work. She has conducted empirical research on standard-setting processes in the fields of quality management system, international accounting and social responsibility. Tamm Hallström is the author of Organizing International Standardization (Edward Elgar 2004) and has recently published in Organization. 