This book is the translated and slightly revised version of the 2008 German publication Generationenbeziehungen im Wohlfahrtsstaat: Lebensbedingungen und Einstellungen im internationalen Vergleich (VS-Verlag, Wiesbaden). It is based on the research project 'Intergenerational relations in the welfare state: living conditions and attitudes of age groups in comparative perspective' funded by the Hans-Böckler-Stiftung. The authors gratefully acknowledge this assistance. For her patient and generous support we particularly thank Erika Mezger, head of the research promotion department ‘The future of the welfare state’ who always regarded our work with favour.

Our study profited from research stays at the Università degli studi di Torino in Turin and the Swedish Institute for Social Research (SOFI) in Stockholm. We want to thank our hosts – Chiara Saraceno of the University of Turin, and Joakim Palme and Tommy Ferrari from SOFI – for their support and valuable comments on our work. We also thank the Network of Excellence EQUALSOC funded by the European Union’s Sixth Framework Programme which enabled these stays.

We presented our results at several meetings to our advisory committee and one expert workshop. For very useful comments we thank Karen Anderson, Thomas Bahlle, Hilke Brockmann, Ekin Deligöz, Irene Dingeldey, Jeanne Fagnani, Elke Hoffmann, Ute Klammer, Thomas Klein, Jürgen Kohl, Dianne Köster, Harald Künemund, Simone Leiber, Lutz Leisering, Andreas Motel-Klingebiel, Ingo Nürnberger, Birgitta Rabe, Barbara Riedmüller, Stefano Sacchi, Chiara Saraceno and Michael Stegmann.

This work would have been never finished in time without the support and advice from our colleagues in the research unit ‘Inequality and Social Integration’ at the Social Science Research Centre, Berlin (WZB). Likewise we want to thank Philipp Schnell, who provided a great deal of research assistance, and Susanne Grasow, Marion Obermaier and Martina Sander-Blanck for their substantial support in preparing the book for publication. Last but not least, a special thanks to John Bendix, who translated the German manuscript and deepened our knowledge about ‘false friends’ in translations from German into English.
