Contributors

Martin A. Bader is Managing Partner of the innovation and intellectual property management advisory group BGW AG which is a spin-off from the University of St.Gallen, Switzerland. He is a European and Swiss Patent Attorney and holds a Master’s degree in Electrical Engineering. Previously, he was Vice President and Chief Intellectual Property Counsel at Infineon Technologies, a leading high-tech semiconductor company worldwide that was carved-out from Siemens. Martin Bader is a former Substitutive Council Representative of the Institute of Professional Representatives before the European Patent Office on behalf of Switzerland. His focus is on innovation and intellectual property management, especially strategic patent portfolio management, including valuation and commercialisation. He has published two books and various articles on intellectual property management.

Oliver Gassmann is Professor of Technology Management at the University of St. Gallen and director at the Institute of Technology Management since 2002. Between 1996 and 2002 he worked for Schindler and lead its Corporate Research as Vice President of Technology Management. Today he serves in several boards: R&D Management (editorial board), BGW St. Gallen-Vienna (co-founder, member of board), GLORAD Beijing-St. Gallen (co-director), Economiesuisse, Project Management Academy (Chairman), Schindler (member of audit expert group), HSG Research Committee (President) and Zühlke Group (member of the board). He has published 12 books as author, co-author and editor, and over 180 publications on management of innovation.

Heinz Goddar is Partner in Boehmert & Boehmert, one of the largest legal practices in Germany specializing in intellectual property. He has a PhD in physics and he is German Patent Attorney and European Patent and Trademark Attorney. He teaches Patent and Licensing Law as an Honorary Professor at the University of Bremen, Germany, as a Lecturer at the Munich Intellectual Property Law Center (MIPLC) in Munich, and as visiting professor in several other Universities around the world. He is a Director of the Global Institute of Intellectual Property (GIIP), Delhi. He is a Past President of LES International and of LES Germany.
The economic valuation of patents

Massimiliano Granieri is Associate Professor of Comparative Private Law and Economic Analysis of Law at the University of Foggia Law School. On behalf of the Chancellor he supervises the industrial liaison office of the University of Foggia. He is Vice President of the IP-management company MI.TO. Technology. His scholarly works include four books and over a hundred articles in the field of intellectual property, antitrust and contract law.

Keld Laursen is Professor of Economics and Management of Innovation at Copenhagen Business School. He serves on the executive committee of the Danish Research Unit for Industrial Dynamics (DRUID) and is a member of the Danish Council for Independent Research | Social Sciences, where he serves as Chairman of the economics section. He has organized and co-organized a number of high-profile international conferences and is the principal investigator on a number of externally funded research projects. He has published articles in journals such as Research Policy, Journal of Economic Behavior & Organization, Industrial and Corporate Change, Organization Science and Strategic Management Journal.

Maria Isabella Leone is Assistant Professor of Economics and Strategy at the Faculty of Law of LUMSA University in Rome. She is also Assistant Coordinator of the PhD Program in Management of Luiss Guido Carli University and lecturer of IP valuation at ALMA Graduate School, University of Bologna. She is a Scientific Member of the Danish Research Project on ‘Open Innovation Search’ led by the Copenhagen Business School. Her research focuses on technology licensing patterns and outcomes, patent valuation and exploitation and innovation financing.

Serena Morricone is Assistant Professor at HEC Lausanne. She holds a PhD in Management from the University of Bologna. She was visiting scholar at NYU Stern Business School and Marie-Curie Fellow at Lancaster University. She is currently researching the value relevance of intangible assets, focusing on the European adoption of International Accounting Standards. Her areas of research also include the accounting treatment of intangible assets, managerial discretion on accounting estimates, the role of financial analysts in stock market and financial analysts’ earnings forecasts, IPO underpricing and signaling models.

Ulrich Moser is Professor of Accounting and Finance at the Erfurt University of Applied Sciences. He is a certified German public auditor, tax advisor (Wirtschaftsprüfer, Steuerberater) and Certified Valuation Analyst (CVA). He acts as a management consultant in the field of Intellectual Property and business valuation, with over 15 years of experience in the field of valuation with a strong focus on valuation of intellectual Federico Munari is Associate Professor of Technology and Innovation Management at the Department of Management of the University of Bologna. He is the Director of the PhD in General Management and Coordinator of the Master in Management of Intellectual Property of the University of Bologna. He was the Co-director of the research project EVPAT (Economic Valuation of Patent), funded by the European Investment Bank under the EIBURS measure. He has published several articles and books on topics related to corporate governance and R&D investments, innovation financing, strategic management and valuation of IPRs.
Contributors

Maria Cristina Odasso is research supervisor for ICM Advisors, an international independent business consulting and research firm specializing in valuation, management and financing of intangible assets and Intellectual Property. She holds a PhD in Economics and Management of Technology from the University of Bergamo. She is also a researcher of the IP Finance Institute, the first European research and competence centre focused on IP economics and finance. Her research interests range in the area of finance of innovation, with a particular focus on IP valuation and patent-backed finance.

Nils Omland is the managing partner of PatentSight, a company dedicated to evaluating patents and innovation. Prior to co-founding PatentSight, Nils worked as a consultant on patent valuation for technology companies and institutions like the European Patent Office. He wrote his doctoral thesis at the WHU Otto Beisheim School of Management, on measuring the competitive advantage created through patented technologies. He also conducted a research project that quantified the profit impact of active patent management.

Raffaele Oriani is Associate Professor of Corporate Finance and Venture Capital at the Department of Economics and Business of LUISS Guido Carli University of Rome. He obtained a PhD in Management from the University Bologna. He has been visiting scholar at the Department of Economics of the University of California at Berkeley and at the Research Department of the Bank of Italy. He was the Co-director of the research project EVPAT (Economic Valuation of Patent), funded by the European Investment Bank under the EIBURS measure. He is currently the Director of the Master in Corporate Finance, the Executive Master in Finance and the Master of Science in Real Estate Finance at Luiss Business School. He has written several publications on the topics of economics, finance and management of innovation in primary international academic journals.

Luigi Sereno is a post-doc researcher at the Department of Economics of the University of Pisa. He got his PhD in Economics from the University of Bologna and was involved as research fellow in the EVPAT project at the Department of Management of the University of Bologna. His research interests focus on economics and management of innovation and financial economics: derivatives, real options and jump diffusion process. He is currently researching the subject of the valuation of patent rights with the real options approach.

Maurizio Sobrero (PhD, MIT) is Full Professor of Innovation Management at the School of Engineering of the University of Bologna. He has been Coordinator of the PhD in Management of the University of Bologna and, since 2007, he is the Director of the Department of Management of the University of Bologna. His research interests are in the fields of economics and management of innovation, with particular attention to the relationship between ownership structure and R&D investments and between R&D investments and firm market value. On these topics he has published several books and numerous articles on national and international journals. He is a Member of the Editorial Board of the European Management Review and of the Journal of Technology Transfer.

Laura Toschi is Assistant Professor of Strategic Management and Entrepreneurship at the Department of Management of the University of Bologna. She was a Post-Doctoral Research Fellow at SPRU – University of Sussex. She received her PhD in Management in 2009 from the University of Bologna. In 2008, she was visiting scholar at Boston University. Her main research interest is in entrepreneurial finance, with a particular focus on the role of Venture Capital for the financing of young and innovative companies and the importance of Corporate Venture Capital as a mechanism to acquire external innovations.

Paola Maria Valenti is Lecturer at the School of International and Public Affairs of Columbia University. She is an economist with expertise in development economics, applied econometrics, applied microeconomics, and economics of antitrust and intellectual property. She served as a consultant at NERA Economic Consulting, developing economic research and quantitative analysis. She has also worked as a consultant for the World Bank’s Human Development Network and Social Protection Group. She holds a PhD from Cornell University.