About the authors

Megan Richardson is a Professor of Law at The University of Melbourne, and Co-Director of the Centre for Media and Communications Law. Her many prior publications on breach of confidence include ‘Breach of Confidence, Surreptitiously or Accidentally Obtained Information and Privacy: Theory Versus Law’, (1994) 19 Melbourne University Law Review 673; and (with Lesley Hitchens), ‘Celebrity Privacy and Benefits of Simple History’ in Andrew T. Kenyon and Megan Richardson (eds), New Dimensions in Privacy Law (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2006). Her book Fashioning Intellectual Property: Exhibition, Advertising and the Press 1789–1918 (with Julian Thomas) is published by Cambridge University Press in 2012.

Michael Bryan is an Emeritus Professor of Law at The University of Melbourne. His fields of expertise include restitution, equity, trusts and commercial law. His prior publications include (with Anthony Duggan and Frances Hanks), Contractual Non-Disclosure (Melbourne: Longmans, 1994); ‘Rescission, Restitution and Contractual Ordering’ in Andrew Robertson (ed.), The Law of Obligations: Connections and Boundaries (London: UCL Press, 2004); as well as various notes and comments in the Law Quarterly Review and Public Law. His book Equity and Trusts in Australia (with Vicki Vann) is published by Cambridge University Press in 2012.

Martin Vranken is a Reader in Law at The University of Melbourne. A comparative lawyer and labour lawyer primarily, his previous book publications include Death of Labour Law? Comparative Perspectives (Melbourne: Melbourne University Press, 2009); Federalism and Labour Law: Comparative Perspectives, edited with Othmar Vanachter (Antwerp: Intersentia, 2004); Employees and the Law: Australasian Experiments (Leuven: Leuven University Press, 2001); and Fundamentals of European Civil Law (Sydney: Federation Press, 1997, 2nd edn, 2010).

Katy Barnett is a Lecturer in Law at The University of Melbourne. She was awarded her PhD in 2010. The thesis is published as a book entitled Accounting for Profit for Breach of Contract: Theory and Practice by Hart Publishing in 2012. Other publications to date include ‘Deterrence and Disgorging Profits for Breach of Contract', (2009) 17 Restitution Law Review 79 and 'Substitutability and Disgorgement Damages in Contract' in Elise Bant and Matthew Harding (eds), Exploring Private Law (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2010).