

Contents

Acknowledgements

vi

PART I WHAT IS THE IMMIGRANT–TRADE LINK AND WHY IT MATTERS

1	An overview of the immigrant–trade relationship	3
1.1	Recent periods of international economic integration	4
1.2	Why the immigrant–trade link matters	11
1.3	What we are doing in this book (and how we do it)	16
2	What are the channels through which immigrants affect trade?	20
2.1	Are migration and trade complements or substitutes?	21
2.2	How do immigrants affect trade flows?	29
2.3	What are the welfare implications for the host country?	35
3	Lessons from prior studies of the immigrant–trade link	37
3.1	Identification of the immigrant–trade relationship	37
3.2	Variation in the immigrant–trade relationship across product classifications	46
3.3	The influences of immigrant characteristics and attributes	47
3.4	Why host country immigration policies matter	50
3.5	How home country characteristics affect the immigrant–trade relationship	53
3.6	Cultural differences and the influences of immigrants on host–home country trade	56
3.7	Estimated per-immigrant effects	57

PART II WHAT FACTORS MAY UNDERLIE THE US IMMIGRANT–TRADE LINK

4	A brief review of US immigration history	63
4.1	Wave I: 1565–1802	64
4.2	Wave II: 1803–68	66
4.3	Wave III: 1869–1917	68
4.4	Wave IV: 1918–68	70
4.5	Wave V: 1969 – present	73

5	Primacy, recency and the US immigrant–trade relationship	78
5.1	The demographic consequences of US immigration policy	79
5.2	Appendix 5.A: Country listing	88
6	The importance of trade-facilitating infrastructure	89
6.1	What is trade-facilitating infrastructure?	90
6.2	Does the level and quality of infrastructure vary across home country cohorts?	91
7	Cultural distance between the US and immigrants' home countries	102
7.1	Studies involving cultural distance, immigrants and trade	103
7.2	Measuring US–home country cultural differences	105
7.3	Calculating US–home country cultural distances	110
PART III EXAMINING THE US IMMIGRANT–TRADE LINK
8	Empirical specification, variable construction and data sources	117
8.1	Baseline specification: the augmented gravity model	117
8.2	Variable construction and data sources	120
8.3	Descriptive statistics	125
9	Verification of the immigrant–trade link	137
9.1	The influence of immigrants on US–home country trade	137
9.2	Immigrants' characteristics and the immigrant–trade link	144
9.3	Immigrants and the effects of cultural distance	148
10	Variation in the immigrant–trade link	154
10.1	Pre-1968 and post-1968 home country cohorts	154
10.2	Disaggregated trade data: trade-intensification and trade-initiation	162
10.3	Appendix 10.A: Core and related cultural goods classifications	172
10.4	Appendix 10.B: Country listing	174
PART IV IMPLICATIONS AND OPPORTUNITIES
11	Lessons for US immigration policy	177
11.1	Perceived vs. real benefits/costs and the influence of risk-averse preferences	179
11.2	Revisiting the immigrant–trade link hypotheses	183
11.3	Maximizing the net social benefit of immigration	191

11.4	Identifying and engineering opportunities for welfare-enhancement	194
12	Summing-up: concluding thoughts and (yet) unanswered questions	201
	References	207
	Index	219