Contributors

Nadezhda Alex is a PhD Student at the University of Siegen. In 2006–8, she worked for the German research team of the EU-financed CBCED project on cross-border entrepreneurship, collecting and analysing data on trust and learning. Her thesis focuses on trust in cross-border co-operations between German and Bulgarian enterprises, considering different cultural contexts.

Melanie J. Ashleigh is a Senior Lecturer in the School of Management, University of Southampton. Her research interests cover a broad spectrum of disciplines, including trust in teams and technology, trust and transactive memory, trust and wellbeing and training and trust.

Reinhard Bachmann is Professor of Strategy at the University of Surrey. He has published widely in journals such as Organization Studies, British Journal of Sociology and the Cambridge Journal of Economics. Together with Christel Lane he edited Trust Within and Between Organisations (Oxford University Press, 1998/2000) and with Akbar Zaheer he edited the Handbook of Trust Research (Edward Elgar, 2006/2008) and the Landmark Papers on Trust (Edward Elgar, 2008). He is Deputy Editor-in-chief of the Journal of Trust Research and serves on the editorial board of Organization Studies. His work emphasizes the role of social mechanisms (trust, power, and so on) and societal influences (institutional arrangements, cultural traditions) on the structure and quality of organizational relationships and business strategies.

Davide Barrera is Assistant Professor in the Department of Social Sciences at the University of Turin. His areas of research interests include social mechanisms, behavioural game theory, co-operation problems and social networks. He has published on the effects of social networks in trust and co-operation problems.

Katinka M. Bijlsma-Frankema is Associate Professor of Organization Theory at VU University Amsterdam and Professor of Organization Sciences at the European Institute for Advanced Studies in Management. Her current research interests include trust, control and performance of teams. She is founder and past chair of the First International Network on Trust (FINT), in which 150 scholars from 29 countries participate, and chaired five international workshops on trust. She co-edited special issues on trust (and control), including Group and Organization Management (2007) and edited volumes on trust (Edward Elgar, 2005), and organizational control (Cambridge University Press, 2010).

Michelle C. Bligh is Associate Professor of Organizational Behavior at Claremont Graduate University. Her research interests include charismatic and political leadership, followership, interpersonal trust and gender issues. Her work has been published in the Journal of Applied Psychology, Leadership Quarterly and Leadership, and she serves on the editorial review boards of Leadership Quarterly, Leadership and the European Journal of Work and Organizational Psychology. Dr Bligh has helped a variety of public and private sector organizations assess and improve their effectiveness in the areas of leadership development, organizational culture and change management.

Boris F. Blumberg is Assistant Professor of Organization and Strategy at Maastricht University. He studied business economics at Mannheim and obtained a PhD in sociology from Utrecht University. Currently his research focuses on social networks, entrepreneurship and self-employment. Moreover, he has a keen interest in research methods and is author of Business Research Methods (McGraw-Hill, 2011), a leading textbook on business research methods.

Gerard Breeman is Assistant Professor at Wageningen University (Public Administration and Policy Group) and Research Fellow at the Montesquieu Institute in The Hague. His main research interests are policy agenda-setting, and trust and policy-making. He publishes in journals such as the Journal of European Integration and Acta Politica.

Chad Brinsfield is Assistant Professor of Management at the University of St Thomas, Opus College of Business, in Minneapolis. He received his MBA in Management and PhD in Labor and Human Resources from the Ohio State University, Fisher College of Business. He has extensive industry experience in manufacturing and logistics, including positions as a general manager for an international automotive parts supplier, and founder and president of a logistics services organization. He has researched and published in the areas of silence and voice in organizations, trust and commitment.

Calvin Burns is Lecturer in Organizational Behaviour at Strathclyde Business School, Glasgow. He is interested in the role of risk and trust in organizational safety culture. An emerging area of his work concerns automatic attitude activation about risk and trust and how this affects decision-making and risk-taking behaviour. Most of his work has been conducted in high-hazard industries such as construction, healthcare and oil and gas production. Currently, he is collaborating on a multi-disciplinary project about risk which is funded by the Canadian government. This will involve research on trust between different government agencies, and between government agencies and the general public.

Vincent Buskens is Professor of Theoretical Sociology in the Department of Sociology and the Interuniversity Center for Social Science Theory and Methodology (ICS) of Utrecht University, and Professor of Empirical Legal Studies at the Erasmus School of Law, Erasmus University, Rotterdam. His research focuses on social networks, trust and other social dilemma problems using experimental as well as survey methods. He is the author of Social Networks and Trust (Kluwer, 2002) and co-editor of the volume eTrust: Forming Relationships in the Online World (Russell Sage Foundation, 2009).

John S. Carroll is Morris A. Adelman Professor of Management at the MIT Sloan School of Management and Engineering Systems Division and Co-Director of the Lean Advancement Initiative. Dr Carroll conducts research on social-psychological and organizational factors that promote safety in high-hazard industries such as nuclear power and health care. He focuses on (1) safety culture as supported by communication, leadership, and systems thinking and (2) self-analysis and organizational learning. Dr Carroll is a Fellow of the American Psychological Society. He has published four books and numerous articles.

Stacey Conchie is Lecturer in Psychology at the University of Liverpool. She is interested in how trust affects risk communication, risk-taking, and safety in organizational settings. Most of her research has been conducted in high-risk or high-hazard industries such as construction, healthcare and oil and gas production. An emerging area of her work concerns automatic attitude activation about trust, or implicit trust.

Donald L. Ferrin is Associate Professor of Organizational Behavior at the Lee Kong Chian School of Business, Singapore Management University. His research focuses on many different aspects of trust in the workplace, including the nature of trust, determinants of trust and trust-formation processes, benefits and functions of trust, trust networks within organizations and trust repair after a violation. His recent work focuses on non-verbal and intuitive sources of trust, the dynamics of trust in the context of negotiation and corporate- and governmental-level trust repair strategies. His research has appeared in various scholarly journals such as the Journal of Applied Psychology, Organizational Behavior and Human Decision Processes and Organization Science.
Nicole Gillespie is Senior Lecturer in Management at the University of Queensland. She has held faculty and research positions at Warwick Business School, Melbourne Business School and the University of Melbourne. Her research interests include trust in organizational contexts (particularly building and repairing trust, developing trust across cultures and trust measurement), as well as leadership, team processes, stress and wellbeing and organizational change. Dr Gillespie’s research appears in leading journals, including Academy of Management Review, Journal of Management and Work and Stress, as well as books and chapters (she is co-editor of Organisational Trust: A Cultural Perspective, Cambridge University Press, 2010).

Christine Goodall completed her doctorate at Staffordshire University in 2007 and since then has conducted independent research while continuing to work professionally in management within the voluntary sector. She also teaches management and social science subjects for Staffordshire University and has worked with the Department for Voluntary Sector Studies at the University of Wales, Lampeter.

Jeffrey C. Kohles is an Associate Professor of Management and Organizational Behaviour in the College of Business Administration, as well as Director and founding member of the Center for Leadership Innovation and Mentorship Building (CLIMB) at California State University, San Marcos. He was previously a Research Fellow at the Center for International Leadership in Buffalo, New York, as well as a Research Associate at the Kravis Leadership Institute in Claremont, California. His research interests include leadership, organizational communication, and the implementation of organization-level vision and strategy at the individual level. His research has been published in the Academy of Management Review, Journal of Applied Psychology, Organizational Behaviour and Human Decision Processes, Leadership Quarterly, Leadership, Group and Organization Management, Journal of Managerial Psychology, Applied Psychology: An International Review, Academy of Management Best Papers Proceedings, European Business Forum and European Journal of Social Psychology. He has also helped a variety of public and private sector organizations assess and improve their effectiveness in the areas of leadership development, organizational culture, strategy implementation and general product and service assessment methodology.

Roderick M. Kramer is the William R. Kimball Professor of Organizational Behavior at the Stanford University Graduate School of Business. He is the author of more than 100 scholarly articles, and his work has appeared in leading journals as well as in popular magazines such as the Harvard Business Review. He is also co-author of numerous books, including Negotiation in Social Contexts, The Psychology of the Social Self, Trust in Organizations, Power and Influence in Organizations, The Psychology of Leadership, Trust and Distrust Within Organizations, Organizational Trust and, most recently, Social Decision Making. Professor Kramer has been a Visiting Scholar at numerous institutions, including the Bellagio Center, London Business School, Oxford University, Harvard University and the Hoover Institution.

Torsten M. Kühlmann is Professor in the Department of Law, Economics and Business Administration at the University of Bayreuth, and he teaches human resource management. His research interests include expatriate management, opportunism, trust and control in transnational business relationships, and knowledge transfers in multi-national companies.

Roy J. Lewicki is the Irving Abramowitz Professor of Business Ethics and Professor of Management and Human Resources at the Max M. Fisher College of Business, Ohio State University. Professor Lewicki maintains research and teaching interests in the fields of negotiation, conflict management and dispute resolution, trust development, managerial leadership, organizational justice and ethical decision-making. His work on trust is currently focused on calibrating trust and distrust dynamics, and measuring trust development and repair. He is the author/editor of numerous research articles and 35 books, including Essentials of Negotiation (McGraw Hill/Irwin, 2010), the leading academic textbook on negotiation.

Edgar Meyer is Senior Lecturer at the School of Management at the University of Southampton. His research interests cover a range of topics with special interests in knowledge, training transfer, learning in organizations, teamwork and leadership.

Miriam Muethel is Assistant Professor and the Chair of Leadership and Human Resource Management at WHU – Otto Beisheim School of Management. She has published in the Journal of International Business Studies (2010), the Journal of International Management (2010), the Journal of World Business (in press), Management International Reviews (in press) and in the Academy of Management Proceedings in 2007 and 2009. In 2009 she was awarded finalist of the Academy of Management Best Paper Award (TIM Division). Before joining WHU, Dr Muethel worked for over two years as a business consultant at Volkswagen in the area of international project management.

Robert Münscher is Head of Advisory Services at the Centre for Social Investment, Heidelberg University. He received his doctorate in Business Administration from Bayreuth University in 2010. His research interests include trust, relationship management and intercultural collaboration in the business and the nonprofit sector.

Bart Nooteboom is the author of ten books, including A Cognitive Theory of the Firm (Edward Elgar, 2009), Inter-firm Collaboration, Learning and Networks: An Integrated Approach (Routledge, 2004), Trust: Forms, Foundations, Functions, Failures and Figures (Emerald Group, 2002), Learning and Innovation in Organizations and Economics (Oxford University Press, 2000), Inter-firm Alliances: Analysis and Design (Routledge, 1999), and some 300 articles on entrepreneurship, innovation and diffusion, organizational learning, transaction cost theory, interfirm relations and trust. He was awarded the Kapp prize for his work on organizational learning and the Gunnar Myrdal prize for his work on trust. He is a member of the Royal Netherlands Academy of Arts and Sciences.

José M. Peiró is Professor of Work and Organizational Psychology at the University of Valencia. He is Director of the Research Institute of Human Resources Psychology, Organizational Development and Quality of Working life (IDOCL) and senior researcher at the Valencian Research Institute of Economics (IVIE). He is President-elect of the International Association for Applied Psychology, past President of the European Association of Work and Organizational Psychology and a Fellow member of the Society for Industrial and Organizational Psychology and the European Academy for Occupational Health Psychology. He has been Associate Editor of the European Journal of Work and Organizational Psychology.

Alex ‘Sandy’ Pentland is a pioneer in organizational engineering, mobile information systems and computational social science. His focus is the development of human-centred technology and the creation of ventures that take this technology into the real world. He directs the Human Dynamics Lab, helping companies to become more productive and creative through organizational engineering, and the Media Lab Entrepreneurship Program, which helps translate cutting-edge technology into real-world impact around the world. He is among the most-cited computer scientists in the world.

Richard L. Priem is the Robert L. and Sally S. Manegold Professor of Management in the Lubar School of Business at the University of Wisconsin-Milwaukee. He is founding Director of the M&I Marshall and Ilsley Corporation Center for Business Ethics and is a regular Visiting Professor at LUISS Guido Carli University in Rome. His research interests include: corporate governance, illegal behaviour, strategy-making Werner Raub is Professor of Sociology in the Department of Sociology and the Interuniversity Center for Social Science Theory and Methodology (ICS) of Utrecht University. His research interests include the development, application and test of formal theoretical models in various fields of the social sciences such as markets, organizations and households as well as experimental tests of such models. He has carried out research on trust in each of these fields and has published widely on these issues in sociology as well as economics, psychology and philosophy.

Robert A. Roe is Emeritus Professor of Organizational Theory and Organizational Behaviour at Maastricht University. He studied psychology and obtained his doctorate at the University of Amsterdam. He was Professor of Work and Organizational Psychology in Delft, Tilburg and Nijmegen, Director of the Work and Organization Research Centre in Tilburg, Director of the Netherlands Aeromedical Institute, and founding President of the European Association of Work and Organizational Psychology. He is currently President of the European Federation of Psychology Associations. His publications cover a broad range of topics in work and organizational psychology.

Denise M. Rousseau is the H.J. Heinz II University Professor of Organizational Behavior and Public Policy at Carnegie Mellon University’s Heinz College and Tepper School of Business; she gained her doctorate in Psychology at UC Berkeley. Professor Rousseau is two-time winner of the Academy of Management’s Terry Award for best management book. Recognized for developing psychological contract theory, her work addresses the powerful reach of individual employee understandings of the employment relationship on work, firms and society. A past President of the Academy of Management, she is a founder of the Evidence-Based Management Collaborative, promoting the better uptake and use of organizational research in management education and practice.

Rosalind H. Searle is a Senior Lecturer in Occupational Psychology at the Open University. Her overarching research interest is organizational trust, especially in human resource management (HRM) contexts: recruitment and selection, and performance management. She has researched in the UK, Europe and South Asia. Recent work has focused on trust and controls in HRM, early trust formation for applicants and the impact of trust in UK voters’ decisions. She has co-edited a book on trust and HRM, Handbook of research methods on trust coco-leads an ESRC seminar series and EGOS SWG in these areas. She sits on the editorial board of the Journal of Trust Research.

Malin Tillmar is Associate Professor at the Division of Business Administration, Department of Management and Engineering, and board member at the HELIX Centre for Working Life Research, at Linköping University. Her research has often been concerned with small businesses. Apart from cross-cultural research on trust in inter-organizational settings, Tillmar has studied entrepreneurship within and through public sector organizations. Currently, trust in the inter-sectoral interactions occurring on the constructed markets for care services has caught her interest.

Eric M. Uslaner is Professor of Government and Politics at the University of Maryland–College Park and Senior Research Fellow at the Center for American Law and Political Science, Southwest University of Political Science and Law, Chongqing. He the author of seven books, including The Moral Foundations of Trust (Cambridge University Press, 2002), Corruption, Inequality, and the Rule of Law: The Bulging Pocket Makes the Easy Life (Cambridge University Press, 2008) and Segregation and Mistrust (Cambridge University Press, forthcoming), and approximately 120 articles. In 2010 he held the US Fulbright Commission Distinguished Chair in American Political Science at the Australian National University.

Benjamin Waber is a doctoral candidate in the Human Dynamics Group at the MIT Media Lab and a graduate student affiliate at the Institute for Quantitative Social Science at Harvard University. Benjamin has been at the forefront of applying sensor and electronic data to management research, studying problems such as informal communication structure, office layout, team behaviour and employee training. His current research interests include dynamic organizational design, organizational behaviour, social networks, sensor networks, prediction mechanisms and information flow.

Antoinette A. Weibel is Professor of Management and Academic Director of the Undergraduate Studies Programme at the University of Liechtenstein and Fellow of Center of Research in Economics, Management, and the Arts at the University of Zurich. She is President of FINT and co-chair of the standard working group on trust in organizations at the European Group of Organizational Studies. Her research interests include: trust in organizations, trust and controls, inter-organizational trust and alliance governance, institutions and intrinsic motivation as well as wellbeing in the workplace.

Friederike Welter is Professor at Jönköping International Business School and Visiting Professor at the Small Business Research Centre at Kingston University.
University, UK. She was awarded the TeliaSonera Professorship of Entrepreneurship at Stockholm School of Economics in Riga, Latvia, for her research on entrepreneurship in a transition context. She has published widely, both nationally and internationally, on entrepreneurship-related topics; and she is Associate Editor of Entrepreneurship Theory and Practice as well as being on the review board of other international entrepreneurship and small business journals.

Michele Williams is Assistant Professor of Organizational Behaviour at Cornell University. Her research focuses on the development of cooperative, high-performance interpersonal relationships, especially on projects involving people from multiple organizations or groups within an organization. Her research concentrates on the influences of interpersonal processes, such as perspective-taking, on how interpersonal trust and co-operation evolve. Professor Williams has consulted on effective collaboration for public and private organizations such as Booz Allen and Hamilton and Massachusetts General Hospital. She is also co-author of the 4-CAP Leadership Assessment – a 360° assessment used by organizations to enhance the leadership potential of managers.