

Acknowledgments

Putting together a collection of interviews involves the help and co-operation of numerous people. First and foremost, I would like to express my sincere gratitude to each economist whom I interviewed for making this book possible. It was an absolute pleasure in all respects.

I am extremely fortunate to teach economics at the Stern School of Business at New York University. Throughout the process of completing the book, many of my colleagues at the Department of Economics were tremendous sources of help and support. In this regard, I would like to thank the following: John Asker, Dave Backus, Heski Bar-Isaac, Adam Brandenburger, Luís Cabral (now at IESE), Allan Collard-Wexler, Ignacio Esponda, Bill Greene, Kim Ruhl, Dick Sylla, Paul Wachtel, Larry White, and Robert Wright.

In addition, I am very grateful to the following individuals who were kind enough to read through my proposed questions for various interviews and provide invaluable feedback: Bruce Buchanan, Jim Cobbe, Patrick Emerson, Gary Fournier, Leora Friedberg, Keith Ihlanfeldt, Andrew Jones, Jim Kahn, Derek Kellenberg, Gary Koop, Patrick Mason, Ian McAvinchey, Tom McCaleb, Steve Medema, Robbie Mochrie, Peter Moffatt, Glenn Okun, Colin Roberts, Donald Rutherford, Tim Salmon, Stuart Sayer, Peter Sloane, Ian Smith, Ian Stewart, and Nick Stratis. Renata Dumitrascu, Andrew Ghahramani, David Lohmeier, and Jason Anno provided excellent interview transcription services.

Finally, I would like to thank the editorial team at Edward Elgar Publishing. Once again, it has been a wonderful experience working with them on a book project. I am indebted to Tara Gorvine for her good humor and encouragement (as well as her “Minds”), and in particular to Laura Elgar, for dropping by my office at NYU early in 2009 and sparking the initial idea behind this volume.
