Comparative Ocean Governance is the product of many years of recurring research and writing efforts and the suggestions, comments, and other help of many people. I especially appreciate the willingness of so many researchers, public interest representatives, and government officials in Hawai'i, the South Pacific, and Australia to take time to talk with me about their work and governance efforts: Athline Clark, Eric Co, Eric Conklin, Chip Fletcher, Terry George, Debbie Gowensmith, Terry Hughes, Kim Hum, Kaylene Keller, Jack Kittinger, Randy Kosaki, John Parks, Rod Salm, Heidi Schuttenberg, David Swatland, Laura Thielen, Naia Watson, Alan White, and Aulani Wilhelm. I would also like to thank Denise Antolini for giving me a reason to be spending a large part of Summer 2010 in Hawai'i (teaching International Environmental Law at the University of Hawai'i School of Law), and both Denise and Maxine Burkett for facilitating contacts while I was there.

Comparative Ocean Governance has also benefited in innumerable ways from the incredible opportunity I received in June 2010 to participate in the Papahānaumokuākea Ahahui Alaka'i, a ten-day program that included seven days on Midway Island in the Papahānaumokuākea Marine National Monument. I gratefully thank both the government sponsors of the program—the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA), and the State of Hawai'i—for their decision to fund and support it and their representatives and program facilitators—respectively, Tracy Ammerman, Linda Schubert, and Danielle Carter—for choosing me to participate in the program. I would also like to thank my co-participants—Marion Ano, Jen Barrett, Chris Baird, Chuck Blay, Al Braun, Randi Brennan, George Hanks, Norbert Larsen, Maya Plass, Doug Schmid, Michelle Schwengel, Hugh Story, Naia Watson, and Sarah Wilson—for all that they shared with me.

Numerous people also aided me in the writing process by supplying research support and comments and feedback. For their contributions to the actual writing of Comparative Ocean Governance, I would like to thank: my research assistant, Lori Beail-Farkas; the April 2011 participants in the Northwestern University School of Law's Searle Research Roundtable on Climate Change, Adaptation, and Environmental Law—Michael Barsa, Alex Camacho, Ann Carlson, David Dana, Holly Doremus, Dan Farber, Victor Flatt, Robert Glicksman, Derek Gunderson, Alica Kaswan, Howard Learner, John Nagle, J.B. Ruhl, Max Schanzenbach, Nick Switanek, Dan Tarlock, Buzz Thompson, Mike Vandenberg, and Donald Waller; and the August 2011 participants in the University of Colorado Law School/Duke University School of Law workshop entitled “Climate Change Law and Policy: Works in Progress Symposium”—William Boyd, Ann Carlson, Fred Cheever, Robert Glennon, Dale Jamieson, Sarah Krakoff, Doug Kysar, John Leshy, Justin Pidot, Jed Purdy, Erin Ryan, Jim Salzman, Mark Squillace, Dan Tarlock, Buzz Thompson, Michael Wara, and Annecoos Wiersema. I would especially like to thank J.B. Ruhl and Buzz Thompson for multiple rounds of particularly helpful comments and suggestions during the various phases of this book project.

I have been researching and writing about various aspects of ocean governance, especially place-based protections, and climate change for many years. Comparative Ocean Governance both benefits from and builds upon my earlier and contemporaneous work on ocean governance and climate change. As a result, I acknowledge the following articles and book chapters as making significant contributions to my work on this book:
