The contributions to this volume have been written by economists, legal scholars, historians, sociologists and political scientists. A collaboration among such a diverse group of scholars, across disciplinary, geographical and time boundaries, demands a considerable amount of ground-work, logistical patience and persistence and – above all – the commitment on the part of the participating scholars to see the project through to the end. We are grateful to our authors to the present volume for their courage and interest to contribute to this ambitious, interdisciplinary collection. We are furthermore grateful to the Collaborative Research Centre ‘Transformations of the State’ at the University of Bremen, Germany and its Speaker, Professor Stephan Leibfried, for generously supporting an international workshop at which some of the papers in this volume were first presented in October 2007. This workshop was jointly organized between the CRC and the German Law Journal, constituting the Journal’s Fifth Annual International Conference. Complementing the intermittently substantively revised and expanded papers from this event, are chapters by renowned scholars in the field, most of which have been written expressly for this volume. Where we are including work that draws on scholarship previously published elsewhere, we are grateful to the following institutions for their generous permission to do so: the German Law Journal, the Illinois Law Review and Cliometrica.

We would like to express our gratitude to Petra Schreiber, Monika Sniegs and Mauro Zamboni for helping organize the initial workshop in Bremen. Finally, we wish to express our immense gratefulness to Ruba Ali, Ph.D. candidate at Osgoode Hall Law School in Toronto, for helping to format the manuscript, and to Maria Panezi, Ph.D. candidate at Osgoode Hall and Visiting Researcher at Harvard Law School, for her diligence and care in formatting and compiling the final manuscript.
