Contributors

Brian Abbott is a Senior Lecturer in Industrial Relations at Kingston University, London. He has written on industrial relations in small firms, voluntary organizations, and his current research interests include the role of civil society organizations (CSOs) in the employment relationship.

Peter Ackers is Professor of Industrial Relations and Labour History at Loughborough University Business School. He has published on coal mining and working class religion, worker participation, partnership, paternalism, trade unions, family friendly policies, Indian industrial relations and pluralist industrial relations theory.

Peter Auer is Senior Fellow at the International Institute for Labour Studies of the ILO. Before this emeritus position, he served as chief of the Employment Analysis and Research Unit of the ILO and directed the European Employment Observatory. He has held positions as invited professor/fellow at the Universities of Cornell, Ithaca, NY, Paris I and Sydney.

Michael Barry is Head of the Department of Employment Relations and Human Resources, within the Griffith Business School at Griffith University. He is co-editor, with Adrian Wilkinson, of the Research Handbook in Comparative Employment Relations (Edward Elgar, 2011).

Harald Bauder is Associate Professor in the Geography Department and the Graduate Program in Immigration and Settlement Studies at Ryerson University. His books include Labor Movement: How Migration Regulates Labor Markets (Oxford University Press) and Immigration Dialectic: Imagining Community, Economy and Nation (University of Toronto Press).

Sharon Bolton is Professor of Organisational Analysis at the University of Strathclyde Business School, where she is Head of the Department of Management. Sharon spent seven years at Lancaster University Management School, following a career as senior administrator in the public and private sectors.

Steve Brammer is Professor of Business and Society and Director of the Centre for Business Organisations and Society at the University of Bath. He is a member of the Executive Committee of the International Association for Business and Society (IABS), and Section Editor for the Journal of Business Ethics.
Contributors

John Burgess is Professor of Management at Curtin University of Technology, Perth, Australia. His research interests are contingent employment, labour market policy, and the HR practices of multinational corporations. He is on the editorial board of Human Resource Management and the Australian Journal of Labour Economics.

Kazutoshi Chatani is Technical Officer of the ILO Office for Indonesia and Timor-Leste. He conducts economic and labour market analysis for Indonesia and authors Labour and Social Trends reports. He drafted the National Employment Strategy for Timor-Leste. He is a guest lecturer at Padjadjaran University on labour market analysis.

Ian Clark is a Reader in IR and HRM at the University of Birmingham, and has published in Work, Employment and Society, The Journal of Management Studies, and the Industrial Relations Journal. He was a member of the Treasury Select Committee on Private Equity, 2007–2009 and is on the Editorial Board of Work, Employment and Society.

Jacqueline Coyle-Shapiro is Professor of Organisational Behaviour at the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE) where she received her PhD. She is currently Senior Editor at the Journal of Organizational Behavior. Her research interests include employment relationship, psychological contracts, social exchange theory, organizational justice and organizational citizenship behavior.

Rashpal K. Dhensa is a PhD candidate in the Employment Relations and Organisational Behaviour Group at the London School of Economics and Political Science (LSE). She is a Chartered Psychologist, and her research interests focus on organizational justice as well as social and personality dimensions of behaviour.

Martin Dowling is Senior Teaching Fellow and Director of Postgraduate Programmes in the School of Management at the University of St Andrews. His main teaching and research areas are HRM and Industrial Relations. He is a Fellow of the Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development and actively involved in its work, holding positions at both local and national level within the Institute.

Anne Fearfull is Senior Lecturer and Director of Business Management Programmes in the School of Business (Accounting and Finance) at the University of Dundee. Her main teaching and research areas are in Critical Management and Organisation Studies and Qualitative Methodologies. She is an Associate Editor of the journal Gender, Work and Organisation.

Keith Townsend and Adrian Wilkinson - 9780857936363
Downloaded from Elgar Online at 05/03/2019 10:11:47AM via free access
Erica French is the Director of Undergraduate Studies at Queensland University of Technology. She is a co-author and editor of Managing Diversity in Australia: Theory and Practice (McGraw Hill, 2010), and numerous journal articles on this and related topics, published in national and international journals.

Gregor Gall is Research Professor of Industrial Relations at the University of Hertfordshire. He is author of four books on unions and editor of four collections on union organizing. Along with Adrian Wilkinson and Rick Hurd, he is editor of The International Handbook of Labour Unions Responses to Neo-Liberalism (Edward Elgar, 2011).

Lonnie Golden is a Professor of Economics and Labor Studies and Employment Relations at Penn State University, Abington College. He is co-editor of two books, including Working Time (Routledge, 2000), and has published research in journals such as Industrial Relations, Journal of Business Ethics, Cambridge Journal of Economics and Journal of Socio-Economics.

John Hassard is Professor of Organizational Analysis at Manchester Business School and Fellow in Management Learning at the Judge Business School, Cambridge. Previously he taught at the London Business School and universities of Cardiff and Keele. His research interests lie in industrial sociology, management history, organization theory and change management.

Edmund Heery is Professor of Employment Relations at Cardiff Business School and Director of Cardiff University’s Centre for Labour Research. He is co-editor of The Sage Handbook of Employment Relations (Sage, 2008) and Reassessing the Employment Relationship (Palgrave Macmillan, 2010).

Julia R. Henly is an Associate Professor at the University of Chicago School of Social Service Administration. Her research on family poverty, the work–family interface, and child care appears in journals such as Journal of Marriage and Family, Social Service Review and Children and Youth Services Review, as well as several edited book volumes.

Jason Heyes is Reader in Human Resource Management and Head of the International Management and Organisation group at Birmingham Business School, University of Birmingham. He is a member of the editorial board of the Industrial Relations Journal.

Bruce E. Kaufman is Professor of Economics at Georgia State University, Research Associate at Griffith University and University of Hertfordshire, and Visiting Professor at Loughborough University. He has written, edited, or co-edited 16 books and numerous scholarly articles, and is co-editor of the annual research volume Advances in Industrial and Labor Relations.
Contributors

Susan J. Lambert is an Associate Professor at the University of Chicago’s School of Social Service Administration. Lambert has written extensively on the changing labour market, hourly jobs, and work–life issues facing the working poor. Her work appears in leading academic journals, edited volumes, and policy briefs.

Tom Lusis is a PhD Candidate in the Geography Department at the University of Guelph. His research interests include labour migrations, the influence of technology on immigrant transnationalism, and Filipino migration to Canadian gateway and second-tier cities.

Scott Lyon is a researcher for Understanding Children’s Work (UCW), an inter-agency research initiative on child labour involving the International Labor Organization, UNICEF and the World Bank.

Leo McCann is Lecturer in International and Comparative Management at Manchester Business School, University of Manchester. He is primarily interested in the sociology of work (especially managerial work) across several nations. He is currently writing a major new textbook on varieties of capitalism for Sage Publications.

E. Patrick McDermott is Professor of Management and Legal Studies at the Franklin P. Perdue School of Business, and Director of Research and Evaluation at the Center for Conflict Resolution at Salisbury University. He served as a Fulbright Lecturer in Law in 2007–2008 at East China University of Political Science and Law in Shanghai, China.

Jonathan Morris is Professor of Organizational Analysis at Cardiff Business School. His research interests lie in new organizational forms and managerial work, organization and work in East Asia, and critical perspectives in new public management. He has published in a number of the leading journals of management studies and organizational analysis.

Furio Rosati is a Professor of Public Finance at the University of Tor Vergata, Rome in the Faculty of Economics, and Research Fellow at the Institute for the Study of Labor in Bonn. He also manages the Understanding Children’s Work (UCW) inter-agency research initiative on child labour involving the International Labor Organization, UNICEF and the World Bank.
Contributors xi

Glenda Strachan is Professor, Department of Employment Relations and Human Resources, Griffith University, Australia. She is an editor of Managing Diversity in Australia: Theory and Practice (McGraw Hill, 2010).

Keith Townsend is currently employed as a Senior Research Fellow in the Centre for Work, Organisation and Wellbeing within the Griffith Business School at Griffith University and Senior Lecturer in the Department of Employment Relations and Human Resources. He has written more than 40 journal articles and book chapters covering a range of employment relations and human resource management topics including working time and work–life balance, employee misbehaviour and resistance, high performing work systems and employee voice. Prior to joining Griffith in 2008 he was employed as a Senior Research Fellow at Queensland University of Technology, and was formerly a manager of a medium-size private sector organization. He has co-edited two other books, Method in the Madness: Research Stories you won’t Read in Textbooks (Chandos Publishing, 2009), and The Future of Employment Relations (Palgrave, forthcoming).

Adrian Wilkinson is Professor of Employment Relations in the Department of Employment Relations and Human Resources and Director of the Centre for Work, Organisation and Wellbeing within the Griffith Business School at Griffith University. He has written nine books, over a hundred articles in refereed journals as well as numerous book chapters and other papers. His books (with co-authors) include Making Quality Critical (Routledge, 1995), Managing Quality and Human Resources (Blackwell, 1997), Managing with TQM: Theory and Practice, (Macmillan, 1998), Understanding Work and Employment: Industrial Relations in Transition (Oxford University Press, 2003), Human Resource Management at Work (4th edn, Chartered Institute of Personnel and Development, 2008), Contemporary Human Resource Management (3rd edn, Pearson, 2009), The Sage Handbook of Human Resource Management (Sage, 2009) and The Oxford Handbook of Participation in Organisations (Oxford University Press, 2010). He was Chief Editor for the International Journal of Management Reviews from 2004–09 and is an Associate Editor for Human Resource Management Journal.
Contributors

Steve Williams is Principal Lecturer in Employment Relations at the University of Portsmouth Business School. He is the co-author of Business in Society (Polity, 2009) and Contemporary Employment Relations: A Critical Introduction (Oxford University Press, 2010).

Geoffrey Wood is Professor at the School of Management, University of Sheffield, and Visiting Professor at the Nelson Mandela University in South Africa. He is author of over a hundred articles, and has authored/co-authored/edited some dozen books. His current research interests centre on the relationship between institutions, finance and firm-level HR and IR practices.