

Acknowledgements

I owe a great deal of thanks to the Australian National University and Professor Amin Saikal for allowing me the opportunity to return to the university as Adjunct Professor in the Centre for Arab and Islamic Studies (the Middle East and Central Asia) mainly for the purpose of writing this book. The centre has been an academic haven for me for many years, and a portal into the world of Middle East studies beyond the realm of government.

Many friends and colleagues have contributed ideas and in some cases, have kindly offered comments on certain chapters in their draft form. I am particularly grateful to Doug Sturkey, Jim Piscatori, Dominic Asquith, Amin Saikal and David Hennessy for penetrating observations which have stimulated my intellectual curiosity and obliged me to sharpen my own thinking. Special thanks also go to Barry Rolfe and Martin Stuart-Fox for their encouragement and perceptive questions. I also extend my thanks to the wonderful support team at the centre – Leila Kouatly, Carol Laslett, Anita Mack and Kerry Pert.

Others to whom I am especially indebted for their insights and advice in regard to the issues addressed in this book include His Royal Highness El Hassan bin Talal, Bashar Anabtawi, Abdel Moneim Said Aly, David Arnold, Sulaiman Awaad, Amr Badr, Magdy Badramany, Osama al-Baz, Mikhail Bogdanov, Anthony Bubalo, Klaus Ebermann, Dagmar Emmery, Michael Fitzgerald, Shafiq Gabr, Alan Goulty, A. Gopinathan, Matthew Gray, Jerry Green, Ian Grey, Ahmed Haggag, Fred Halliday, Stuart Harris, Taher Helmy, Abdel Aziz el-Hinnai, Cecil Hourani, Saad Eddin Ibrahim, Mehdi Ilhan, Abdel Karim Kabariti, Wael Karadsheh, Rouben Karapetian, Ahmed Ali Maher, William Maley, Ahmed Mango, Phil McKinnon, Raouf al Mishriki, Hala Mustapha, Jan Natanski, Kirill Nourzhanov, Richard O'Brien, Ian Parmeter, Sarah Phillips, Steve Pinhorn, Derek Plumbley, Sami El-Raghy, Peter Rodgers, Frank Ricciardone, Omar el-Rifai, Jacinta Sanders, Bouthaina Shabaan, Mohammed Taufik, Stewart White, Peter Wirth, Hesham Youssef, Mona Zaki, El-Hamy el-Zayyat and Awad al-Zuweideh.

I am grateful to Laura Elgar at Edward Elgar Publishers for her encouragement and support throughout the writing of this book. It has been a pleasure working with Laura and her colleagues. Lynne Payne has also been a great help with preparation of the initial manuscript in Canberra.

Finally, I would like to thank former Australian foreign ministers Gareth Evans and Alexander Downer, and my former colleagues in the Australian Department of Foreign Affairs and Trade for their friendship and support throughout my career, for allowing me to move over the years between the public service and academia, and for their ongoing indulgence of my fascination with the Arab and Islamic world.

*Robert Bowker
The Australian National University
Canberra
March, 2010*