Acknowledgements

I would like to express profound appreciation to the Chiang Ching-kuo Foundation for International Scholarly Exchange for its financial support for this research project. The research benefited enormously from field observation and interviews with: the China directors or program managers of some major international non-governmental organizations (INGOs) which ran projects in the country; leaders of their Chinese partner organizations; and a number of Chinese political activists based overseas. Interviews were conducted during my travels to Beijing, Yunnan, Shanghai, New York and Washington DC, but some via correspondence. I would like to express deep gratitude to all those interviewed (details are listed in the References). Certainly I am solely responsible for the arguments and analysis created after interpreting the information and insights which the interviewees generously shared with me. I would also like to gratefully acknowledge the support and encouragement from some of my colleagues at the Discipline Group of Political Science and International Relations at the University of Western Australia. Prof. Bruce Stone and Dr. Roderic Pitty showed keen interest in the progress and ideas from the project, and the latter read one chapter with valuable factual corrections. Linley Hill, our administrative officer, diligently managed the nitty-gritty of the research grant. Frank LaMacchia, a graduate from the Discipline Group working in Kunming for Pact International, made great efforts to facilitate my research trip to Yunnan and unreservedly offered his own thoughts on similar issues. Dr. Sky Croeser, another graduate from the group, has worked meticulously in editing the manuscript despite her own busy work schedule.
