Contributors

Gillian Brock is a professor of philosophy at the University of Auckland in New Zealand. Her most recent work has been on global justice and related fields. She is the author of Global Justice: A Cosmopolitan Account (Oxford University Press, 2009) and editor or co-editor of Current Debates in Global Justice (Springer, 2005), The Political Philosophy of Cosmopolitanism (Cambridge University Press, 2005), Necessary Goods: Our Responsibilities to Meet Others’ Needs (Rowman and Littlefield, 1998), Global Health and Global Health Ethics (Cambridge University Press, 2011), and other titles are forthcoming. She has published over 100 peer-reviewed papers, including in journals such as Ethics, Canadian Journal of Law and Jurisprudence, American Philosophical Quarterly, the Monist, and the Journal of Social Philosophy. She holds editorial positions with a number of journals and book series. She is an Associate Editor for the journal, Politics, Philosophy and Economics.

B.S. Chimni is Professor and Chairperson, Centre for International Legal Studies (CILS), Jawaharlal Nehru University, New Delhi. He has served as Vice Chancellor of the West Bengal National University of Juridical Sciences, Kolkata. He has been a Visiting Professor at Brown and Tokyo Universities. He has also held visiting positions at Harvard University, Cambridge University, University of Minnesota, and York University. He has published widely in the field of international economic law. He is the author of International Commodity Agreements: A Legal Study (Croom Helm, 1987).

Paul Clements is Professor of Political Science and Director of the Master of International Development Administration Program at Western Michigan University. His recent publications include Rawlsian Political Analysis: Rethinking the Microfoundations of Social Science (University of Notre Dame Press, 2012), “Evaluating the Cost Effectiveness of Heifer International Country Programs”, Journal of MultiDisciplinary Evaluation (2012), and “The World Bank for Africa or the World Bank for the World Bank?” in Jack Mangala (ed.), Africa and the New World Era: From Humanitarianism to a Strategic View (Palgrave Macmillan, 2010).
Contributors

Lindita V. Ciko has an MA in Philosophy from Boston University and a JD from Boston College Law School, where she is currently a Graduate Research Fellow in International Economic Law. She has interned at the US Federal District Court for the District of MA, the Supreme Judicial Court of MA and the Office of the US Trade Representative.

Dr. Carlos M. Correa is Special Advisor on Intellectual Property and Trade of the South Centre and Director of the Center for Interdisciplinary Studies on Industrial Property and at the Law Faculty, University of Buenos Aires. He has been a visiting professor in postgraduate courses at several universities and consultant to UNCTAD, UNIDO, UNDP, WHO, FAO, IDB, INTAL, World Bank, SELA, ECLA, UNDP, and other regional and international organizations. He has advised several governments on intellectual property, innovation policy and public health. He was a member of the UK Commission on Intellectual Property, of the Commission on Intellectual Property, Innovation and Public Health established by the World Health Assembly and of the FAO Panel of Eminent Experts on Ethics in Food and Agriculture. He is the author of several books and numerous articles.

Frank J. Garcia is Professor of Law and a Law School Fund Research Scholar at the Boston College Law School. A Fulbright Scholar, he has lectured widely on globalization and international economic law in Europe, South America and the Asia/Pacific region. He has served on the Executive Boards of the International Economic Law and International Legal Theory Interest Groups of the American Society of International Law, and currently sits on the editorial board of the Journal of International Economic Law. He is the author of Trade, Inequality and Justice (Martinus Nijhoff, 2003), the co-editor of Global Justice and International Economic Law: Opportunities and Prospects (Cambridge, 2011), and author of the monograph Global Justice and International Economic Law: Three Takes (Cambridge, 2013).

Baogang He is Professor of Public Policy and Global Affairs at Nanyang Technological University, Singapore. He has published four single-authored books and four co-authored books, 54 international refereed journal articles, 53 book chapters, and numerous Chinese publications. His publications deal with a wide range of issues such as deliberative democracy, citizenship, federalism, regionalism, multiculturalism, civil society, national identity questions.

Chin Leng Lim is an international lawyer and former trade negotiator. He is currently Professor of Law at the University of Hong Kong, and chairs the East Asian International Economic Law and Policy Programme.
EAIEL). He is also Visiting Professor at King’s College London, a barrister and a Member of the Hong Kong Committee for Pacific Economic Cooperation.

John Linarelli is Professor of Law and Legal Theory, Dean of Law and Head of College at Swansea University Law School. His publications are in justice and equality, law and globalization, transnational legal orders, international economic law and philosophy of law. His recent work includes co-editing, with Chios Carmody and Frank J. Garcia, Global Justice and International Economic Law: Opportunities and Prospects, published by Cambridge University Press. He serves as Chair of the International Legal Theory Interest Group of the American Society of International Law. He has been a permanent and visiting professor and lecturer at several American and British universities and has served as a consultant to various international organisations.

Sarianna M. Lundan holds the Chair in International Management and Governance at the University of Bremen in Germany. She received her PhD from Rutgers University (US), and has held prior appointments at the University of Reading (UK) and at Maastricht University (The Netherlands). She was an Associate Research Fellow at the Research Institute of the Finnish Economy (ETLA) in Helsinki, and a founding member of the Centre for Transnational Studies (ZenTra), a joint initiative of the Universities of Bremen and Oldenburg. She has published widely in journals and books, and co-authored with John H. Dunning the second edition of Multinational Enterprises and the Global Economy, an influential reference work in the field of international business. She has also consulted extensively with the United Nations and the World Bank on issues related to the development impact of foreign investment. She is an elected Fellow of the European International Business Academy (EIBA), and serves on several editorial boards, including the Journal of International Business Studies, the Multinational Business Review and the Global Strategy Journal. Her current research interests focus on the co-evolution of multinational enterprises and the institutional environment in which they operate.

Andrea Maneschi is Professor of Economics, Emeritus, at Vanderbilt University. After receiving a BA in Engineering Science at Oxford University in 1958 and a PhD in Political Economy at Johns Hopkins University in 1964, he worked at Yale University and the University of Sao Paulo, Brazil, before coming to Vanderbilt in 1970. He has taught courses in international trade, globalization, environmental economics, and the history of economic thought. His book Comparative Advantage in International Trade: A Historical Perspective (Edward Elgar, 1998) explores the origin and evolution of one of the key concepts of international economic theory and policy, the principle of comparative advantage. He recently adopted and further developed a new interpretation of David Ricardo’s pioneering concept of comparative advantage.

Hannah Murphy is a politics and international relations lecturer in the School of Social Sciences at the University of Tasmania, Australia. She is author of The Making of International Trade Policy: NGOs, Agenda-setting and the WTO (Edward Elgar, 2010), as well as other works on the multilateral economic agencies and civil society groups. Her current research focuses on the global governance of employment and labour standards.

Ernst-Ulrich Petersmann is Emeritus Professor and former head of the Law Department at the European University Institute at Florence (Italy). He was legal advisor for the German Ministry of Economic Affairs, GATT and the WTO, and served as secretary, member or chairman of numerous GATT/WTO dispute settlement panels. During his more than 30 years of academic teaching at universities in Germany, Switzerland, Italy, the USA and in Asian countries, he published 30 books and more than 250 articles on international and European law, constitutional law and human rights.