References

Baumol, W.J. (1977), ‘Say’s (at least) eight laws, or what Say and James Mill may really have meant’, Econometrica, 44 (May), 145–62.

Blaug, M. (1995), ‘Why is the quantity theory of money the oldest surviving theory in economics?’, in M. Blaug et al., The Quantity Theory of Money:
References

From Locke to Keynes and Friedman, Aldershot, UK and Brookfield, USA: Edward Elgar, pp. 27-49.

References

References

Hollander, S. (1979), The Economics of David Ricardo, Toronto: Toronto University Press.
References

References

Lachmann, L.M. (1943), ‘The role of expectations in economics as a social science’, Economica, 10 (Feb.), 12–23.

The Concept of Equilibrium in Different Economic Traditions

References

Quesnay, F. (1758), Tableau Économique, in M. Kuczynski and R.L. Meek (eds), Quesnay’s Tableau Économique, London: Macmillan.
The Concept of Equilibrium in Different Economic Traditions

Reuten, G. (2004), ‘“Zirkel vicieux” or Trend Fall? The Course of the Profit Rate in Marx’s Capital III’, History of Political Economy, 36 (1), 163–86.
References

The Concept of Equilibrium in Different Economic Traditions

Say, J.B. (1821), Letters to Mr. Malthus, New York: Kelley.

The Concept of Equilibrium in Different Economic Traditions

References

