Contributors

Christos Anagnostopoulos is Lecturer within the Sport and Event Management Department at Coventry Business School, Coventry, UK, an associate member of the Centre for International Business of Sport (CIBS), and the head of the Sport Unit at the Athens Institute for Education and Research (ATINER). His doctoral dissertation (2008–2013) looked at the managerial decision-making process within the charitable foundations of the English football clubs. Christos’ key teaching and research interests lie in organizational behaviour with a focus on issues such as decision making, influence tactics and interpersonal trust associated with the concept of corporate social responsibility in and through sport. He has presented papers at the European Academy of Management and the European Association of Sport Management and has published articles in Business Ethics: A European Review, Soccer and Society and Sport, Business and Management: An International Journal.

Tommy D. Andersson is Professor of Tourism and Hospitality Management in the School of Business, Economics and Law at Gothenburg University, Gothenburg (Sweden) where he is also coordinating a master programme in ‘Tourism and Hospitality Management’. He received his PhD in managerial economics at Gothenburg University in 1989 and served from 1997 as a professor in Management Accounting at Bodø Graduate School in Norway and later on as Programme Director at the European Tourism Research Institute. His main research interests are managerial economics of the hospitality industry, economic impact analysis, event and festival management, restaurant management accounting, tourism economics and cost–benefit analysis. Most of his publications are in the area of event impact analysis and event management.

Anne-line Balduck finished her PhD in 2009 at the Department of Movement and Sports Sciences at Ghent University, Belgium, in sports management. Her research interests include organizational effectiveness, social impact, coach–athlete relationships and motivation in sports management. She has published extensively in international peer-reviewed journals and currently she supports the scientific research in sports management at Ghent University.

Nikolai Böhlke studied management at the University of Cologne (Germany) and the Pennsylvania State University (USA) as well as sport science at the German Sport University in Cologne. In 2002 he started working as a research and teaching assistant at the German Sport University before he joined the Institute for Sport and Leisure Policy at Loughborough University (England) in 2003 where he completed his PhD in 2006. From 2007 to 2013 Nikolai worked in the Research and Innovation Team at UK Sport (London). In 2013 he joined the Swiss Federal Institute of Sport, Magglingen.

Veerle De Bosscher is Professor at the Department of Sports Policy and Management (Faculty of Physical Education) in the Vrije Universiteit Brussel, Brussels (Belgium). She does research in the area of elite sport policies, international comparisons, measuring competitiveness and benchmarking of nations. Veerle is coordinating an international network of research cooperation in high performance sport, including over 15 nations, called SPLISS (Sports Policy Factors Leading to International Sporting Success), which was also the subject of her PhD. Since 2012 Veerle has been appointed as a Visiting Professor at Utrecht University (The Netherlands).

Maarten van Bottenburg is Professor of Sport Development at the Utrecht School of Governance of Utrecht University (The Netherlands). Prior to his full-time appointment as professor at this university in 2010 he was also Lecturer in Sport Business at Fontys University of Applied Sciences (2004–2009) and Research Director (2002–2006) of the W.J.H. Mulier Institute – a leading centre for research on sports in society in the Netherlands. Before 2002 he was managing director of a private social science research company specializing in matters of sports policy (1992–2002) and was attached to the University of Amsterdam and the Amsterdam School for Social Science Research (1988–1992). In his academic work, Maarten has focused on themes such as the globalization and commercialization of sport, elite sport policy, sport participation trends, the societal meaning of sport and sport management. Among many other books, Van Bottenburg is the author of Global Games (2001) and co-author of the Global Sporting Arms Race (2008). He has published articles in journals such as the American Behavioral Scientist, Leisure Studies, Journal of Sport Management, Sport Management Review, European Sport Management Quarterly and the International Review for the Sociology of Sport.

Ann Bourke is currently Head of Teaching and Learning at University College Dublin (UCD) Business School, Dublin (Ireland). In that role, she advises faculty on curriculum design, delivery and assessment and coordinates school policy on education and programme specific matters. Ann lectures in International Business, Services Management and Research Methods. Her main research interests include international trade in services, governance issues for sports organizations (professional and amateur), elite athlete development and continuing professional education. She has published extensively and presented at many international seminars and conferences. Ann is a former board member of the European Association of Sport Management (EASM).

Marc Buelens, PhD, is Professor at the Vlerick Leuven Ghent Management School and at the department of management, innovation and entrepreneurship of the University of Ghent (Belgium). His teaching focuses on management behaviour. His research interests are organization theory, change management and leadership.

Simon Chadwick is Professor of Sport Business Strategy and Marketing, and Director of the Centre for the International Business of Sport, at Coventry University, UK. He has published and commented extensively and internationally on the subject of sport. Among the outlets in which Simon’s work has appeared or been quoted are the Journal of Advertising Research, the Wall Street Journal, Elsevier Publishing and Cable News Network (CNN). He has also worked with many of the world’s leading sport organizations including Union of European Football Associations (UEFA), Mastercard, the International Tennis Federation, FC Barcelona and Octagon.
T. Bettina Cornwell (PhD in marketing, the University of Texas) is the Edwin E. and June Woldt Cone Professor of Marketing in the Lundquist College of Business at the University of Oregon, Portland (USA). She is also Director of Research for the Warsaw Sport Marketing Center at the University of Oregon. Prior to joining the University of Oregon, Bettina was Professor of Marketing and Sport Management at the University of Michigan. Her research focuses on marketing communications and consumer behaviour and often includes international and public policy emphases. Recent research on sponsorship-linked marketing has appeared in the Journal of Consumer Research and the Journal of Experimental Psychology.

Michel Desbordes is Professor of Sports Marketing at ISC School of Management (Paris, France). His research covers sports events, the marketing of football, sporting venues, and experiential marketing as applied to sporting events. Since 2008 he has been the scientific editor for the International Journal of Sports Marketing & Sponsorship. He has been visiting professor in Canada, China, the USA, the Netherlands, Spain, Finland, England and South Korea. In addition, he acts as consultant for a variety of organizations and firms, like UEFA, Adidas, New Balance, Tour de France, Rally Dakar, Paris Marathon, Reebok and Stade de France.

Mark Dibben, Dr, is Associate Professor and Head of the School of Management at the University of Tasmania, Hobart (Australia). His research adopts the metaphysics of Alfred North Whitehead to gain a processual understanding of (managerial) experience. To this end, he has published two edited books on applied process thought with the philosophy publisher Ontos and remains on the board of the International Process Network, the coordinating body of some 30 process philosophy research centres around the globe, having served as its Executive Director 2008–11. He is also co-editor of Philosophy of Management. He focuses on the nature and impact of trust, distrust and cooperation on managed interpersonal relations. He published on this topic across a variety of academic disciplines, from management sub-fields such as strategy, entrepreneurship and marketing, to accounting, information systems, medicine and philosophy. Throughout this work, he has obviously adopted longitudinal qualitative methods.

Harald Dolles is Professor in Sport Management at Molde University College, Specialized University in Logistics, Molde (Norway). He also holds a professorship in International Business at the University of Gothenburg in Sweden. Harald received his doctorate in international business/strategic management from the University Erlangen-Nuremberg in Germany, with a focus on East Asia. He has been Assistant Professor at Bayreuth University (Germany), where he taught on the University’s sports management programme. From 2001 to 2006 he was assigned by the German Ministry of Education and Science to serve in official mission as expert on Japan and China at the economic section of the German Institute for Japanese Studies in Tokyo and taught as Visiting Professor at Chuo University (Tokyo, Japan). Harald frequently contributes to scientific development in the fields of international business, Asian studies and sports management. In this regard, he has a publication stream of articles and books, most recently スポーツ・マネジメントと メガイベント: Jリーグ・サッカー とアジアのメガスポーツ・イベント(Sports Management and Mega Events: J-League Soccer and Mega-Sports Events in Asia) (Bunshindo, 2012, with Takahashi, Hayakawa and Söderman); ‘Evaluating and Bernd Frick, Dr, is Professor of Organizational and Media Economics in the Faculty of Management and Economics and Vice President with responsibility for strategy, finance and international relations at the University of Paderborn, Germany. He studied Sociology, Economics and Political Science at the University of Trier and at Clark University, Worcester, Massachusetts. Before joining the Faculty of Management and Economics at the University of Paderborn, Bernd held the Chair in Personnel and Organizational Economics at the University of Greifswald and the Reinhard Mohn-Chair in Organizational Economics and Leadership at Witten/Herdecke University. He is also Director of the Institute of Labor and Personnel Economics at Mobile Life Campus of Volkswagen AG in Wolfsburg and Research Associate at the Institute for Labour Law and Industrial Relations in the European Community at the University of Trier.

Hallgeir Gammelsæter is Professor in Social Change, Organization, and Management at Molde University College, Specialized University in Logistics, Molde (Norway). Before taking up sport studies, in particular the organization of football, ten years ago he conducted research on organizational change, management in professional organizations, knowledge diffusion, and innovation in private and public institutions. Hallgeir has co-authored several Norwegian books and The Organisation and Governance of Top Football across Europe (Routledge, 2011, together with Senaux). He also recently published on the organization of football in journals Soccer and Society and European Sport Management Quarterly.

Chris Gratton, BA(Econ), MA(Econ), PhD, is Professor of Sports Economics and Director of the Sport Industry Research Centre (SIRC) at Sheffield Hallam University, UK. He currently has five academic sports books in print, the latest being The Economics of Sport Broadcasting published in 2007. Chris’s main areas of research include: the economic benefits of major sports events; measuring the economic importance of sport including the use of satellite accounts for sport; and the analysis and modelling of large sports participation surveys. He has represented the UK on the European Union (EU) Workshop on Sport and Economics since 2006.
Alessandro ‘Chito’ Guala is Professor of Citymarketing at the University of Torino (Italy), where he founded the Olympics and Mega Events Research Observatory (OMERO) in 2001. He served as City Councillor for Tourism of the Municipality of Genoa (1993–97) and was Visiting Professor at the Universities of Madison, Wisconsin, and San Diego, California. His main interests are social indicators, quality of life, mega events and urban regeneration. Since 2001 Alessandro carried out research on the Olympics, monitoring the Olympic Winter Games Torino 2006, and collaborating with the International Olympic Committee (IOC). He is also a consultant of several institutions in the field of tourism and cultural planning.

Sean Hamil is a Lecturer in Management at Birkbeck College, University of London, where he is the programme director of the MSc Sport Management and the Business of Football, and a Director of Birkbeck Sport Business Centre, one of Britain’s leading academic centres for the study of sport business. He is a member of the academic scientific committee of the Master in European Sport Governance. Sean has published extensively on the issue of corporate governance and regulation of sport organizations. Notably he is editor/author of Managing Football: An International Perspective (Butterworth-Heinemann, 2009) and Who Owns Football? The Governance and Management of the Club Game Worldwide (Routledge, 2010).

Kjetil Kåre Haugen is Professor of Logistics at Molde University College, Specialized University in Logistics, Molde (Norway). Kjetil holds a PhD in Management Science from the Norwegian Institute of Technology from 1991. Lately, his research interests have moved from operations management/logistics into sports economics/strategy. His main interest has been game theory applied in football, both as a tool to understand football economics as well as the game itself. Kjetil has published in journals such as Journal of Sports Economics, European Sport Management Quarterly and Sport in Society, among others. He is a massive supporter of Molde Football club.

Boris Helleu is a Senior Lecturer in Sports Management at Université de Caen Basse-Normandie, France, and has headed the Sports Management programme since 2010. He received a PhD in Sports Sciences from Université de Rouen and his thesis was devoted to the geographic aspects of the regulation of professional sport. His work looks at sport as an event combining contributions from economics (models of sports regulation), geography (the globalization and metropolization of professional sport) and marketing (fans and stadiums). Recently he has been working on the relationship between sports and social media. He was also the scientific adviser on the ministerial reports devoted to the competitiveness of French professional football (2008) and arenas (2010).

Patricia Hogan is Professor in Management of Health and Fitness at Northern Michigan University in Marquette, Michigan, USA. She researches and publishes in the areas of developing professional intellect in university students, inquiry-based and problem-based learning, professional ethics, prosumerism, social media applications (especially wikis) in education mission-central learning, and in Social Media for Health, Fitness, and Sport Business.

Hans Jansson is Professor of International Marketing at the Linnaeus School of Business and Economics at Linnaeus University, Kalmar (Sweden), where he is the Head of the Linnaeus Baltic Business Research Center. He graduated from Uppsala University in 1981, and was previously professor at University of Lund and University of Göteborg as well as a senior fellow at National University of Singapore. Hans has an extensive research experience in international marketing and business in emerging markets, both on multinational corporations and small and medium-sized enterprises in Eastern Europe and South and East Asia, especially China. He has published eight books and a large number of articles and conference papers. The most recent are International Business Strategy in Emerging Country Markets – The Institutional Network Approach (Edward Elgar, 2007) and International Business Marketing in Emerging Country Markets – The Third Wave of Internationalization of Firm (Edward Elgar, 2007).

R. Burke Johnson is a Professor in the Department of Professional Studies at the University of South Alabama. He holds three masters degrees (psychology, sociology, and public administration). His PhD is from the REMS Program (Research, Evaluation, Measurement, and Statistics) at the University of Georgia. He is first author of Educational Research: Quantitative, Qualitative, and Mixed Approaches (Sage, 2011), and second author of Research Methods and Design (Pearson, 2010) and Dictionary of Statistics and Methodology (Sage, 2011). He is author or co-author of numerous articles and chapters on mixed methods research, was an associate editor of the Journal of Mixed Methods Research, was guest editor of a special issue on mixed methods research in Research in the Schools, and of another special issue on mixed methods research with the American Behavioral Scientist. His current interests are in research methodology (especially mixed) and the history and philosophy of social science.

Marc Maes passed away suddenly on 14th August 2010. He was Professor at the Department of Movement and Sports Sciences at Ghent University in sports management. Under his leadership, sports management at Ghent University developed into a full-fledged department. He combined both scientific research with his practical management experience. He was recognized as a leading expert in the areas of sports management and ethics.

Norm O’Reilly is a Professor at the University of Ottawa (Canada), specializing in sport business. Holder of BSc, MA, MBA and PhD degrees, as well as the Certified General Accountant (CGA) accounting designation, he has previously taught at the David Falk Center for Sport Management at Syracuse University, the Graduate School of Business at Stanford University, the School of Sports Administration at Laurentian University, and the Ted Rogers School of Management at Ryerson University. A former elite athlete and sport administrator, he has published five books, over 50 articles in refereed management journals and over 100 conference proceedings and case studies in the areas of sport management, tourism marketing, marketing, risk management, sport finance and social marketing. He is the lead researcher on the Canadian Sponsorship Landscape Study, a highlight of the annual Canadian Sponsorship Forum.

Leigh Robinson is a Professor of Sport Management at the University of Stirling (UK). Her research expertise lies in the field of organizational performance management and capacity development in the sport not-for profit sector. She works extensively with Olympic sport organizations throughout the world, focusing on capacity building in developing sport systems. Leigh is author of Managing Public Leisure Services and co-editor of Managing Olympic Sport Organisations and Managing Voluntary Sport Organisations.

Andy Rudd holds a PhD in sport ethics from the University of Idaho. Additionally, he has a strong background in research methods and programme evaluation. His research interests are in the areas of character development, sportsmanship, ethical decision-making and spectator aggression. Andy also has methodological interests in mixed methods and scale development. Across these aforementioned topics, he has a publication stream of several articles. His articles can be seen in journals such as the Journal of Sport Management, Sport Management Review and the International Journal of Sport Management. He is currently on the sport management faculty at Belmont Abbey College in Belmont, North Carolina (USA).

James Santomier is Professor in the Department of Marketing and Sport Management, John F. Welch College of Business, Sacred Heart University, Fairfield, Connecticut, USA. He joined the faculty of Sacred Heart University in 1999. He received a PhD in Physical Education from the University of Utah. James has held academic positions at the University of New Haven, Hong Kong Institute of Education, New York University, the University of Oregon and the University of the Pacific. He has published extensively in the areas of sport management, sociology of sport, stress management, and psychosocial aspects of physical activity and sport. His research and publications reflect an interest in the organizational and social psychological dimensions of sport, fitness and physical education, the management dimensions of sport business and the integration of new media in sport.

Torsten Schlesinger is Research Assistant at the Department of Sport Sociology and Sport Management, Institute of Sport Science, University of Berne, Switzerland. He received his doctorate at TU Chemnitz in Germany in Sport Sciences. His research interests relate to different aspects of sports marketing (emotions in the context of sport marketing events, analysing sport sponsorship effectiveness), human resource management in voluntary sport clubs and sport club development. This actual research reflects a combination of individual and institutional perspectives for the investigation of individual decisions (multi-level analysis). He has published articles in journals such as European Sport Management Quarterly, International Journal of Sport Management and Marketing, European Journal of Sport and Society, and European Journal of Sport Science.

Benoit Senaux is Senior Lecturer and Director of the postgraduate programmes in sport management at Coventry University (UK). Prior to that, he was Associate Professor in Management Control at Reims Management School (France). His research focuses on institutional change and the commercialization of sport, and its impact on clubs’ organizational identity and governance. He has published articles on the governance and organization of sport in International Journal of Sport Management and Marketing, Soccer & Society and Sport, Business and Management. Benoit has recently co-authored The Organisation and Governance of Top Football across Europe (Routledge, 2011, together with Gammelsæter).
Simon Shibli is Director of the Sport Industry Research Centre (SIRC) at Sheffield Hallam University, England. Simon is a graduate in Physical Education, Sport Science and Recreation Management from Loughborough University and also a qualified management accountant (ACMA). The SIRC team provide research and consultancy services to a range of clients such as national agencies, national and international governing bodies of sport and local authorities. The SIRC has been involved in elite sport related work since 1997 and with UK Sport (Jerry Bingham) is one of the founding members of the SPLISS consortium.

Eivind Å. Skille is a sport sociologist and Professor at the Norwegian School of Sport Sciences, Department of Culture and Society, and Hedmark University College, Faculty of Health and Sports, in Norway. His main research interests are sport policy, sport organization and sport participation. Eivind has a doctoral degree from the Norwegian School of Sport Sciences in Oslo, and he has published in journals such as International Review for the Sociology of Sport, Sport Education and Society, Sport in Society, European Sport Management Quarterly and Sport Management Review.

Aaron C.T. Smith is Professor and Deputy Pro-Vice Chancellor in the College of Business at Royal Melbourne Institute of Technology (RMIT) University, Melbourne, Australia. He was previously Director of Sport and Leisure Management and held the Chair of Sport Management at La Trobe University, Melbourne. Aaron has research interests in the management of psychological, organizational and policy change in business, and sport and health, and has authored or co-authored 13 books which examine these issues. Aaron also has an extensive background in organizational consulting. He has worked in the Asia-Pacific, Europe, North America and the Middle East in a diverse range of sectors and industries including multinational corporations, professional sporting clubs, national and state sport associations, media companies, sport and entertainment facilities, government and not-for-profit organizations.

Sten Söderman is Professor of International Business in the School of Business at Stockholm University, Stockholm, Sweden. Previously he was a professor at Luleå University of Technology and a business consultant specializing in startups (in Manila, Geneva and Brussels). His research has focused on market strategy development and implementation and is currently on the international expansion of European firms in Asia and the global entertainment economy. He is the author and editor of many books, case studies and articles. His most recent publications include Football and Management: Comparisons between Sport and Enterprise (Palgrave Macmillan, 2013); Sports Management and Mega Events: J-League Soccer and Mega-Sports Events in Asia (Bunshindo, 2012, with Takahashi, Hayakawa and Dolles); ‘Evaluating and measuring: applying a management perspective on sports’ (Sport Business & Management, October 2012, with Dolles); Sport as a Business: International, Professional and Commercial Aspects (Palgrave Macmillan, 2011, with Dolles); ‘Managing sport: governance and performance’ (Sport Business & Management, October 2011, with Dolles); ‘Mega-sporting events in Asia: impacts on society, business and management’ (Asian Business & Management, June 2008, with Dolles); ‘Developing international sport’ (International Journal of Sports Marketing and Sponsorship, October 2008, with Dolles); ‘Sponsoring the Beijing Olympic Games – patterns of sponsor advertising’ (*Asia Pacific Journal of Marketing and Harry Arne Solberg is a Professor of Economics at Trondheim Business School, Sør-Trøndelag University College and Molde University College (all Norway). Harry Arne holds a PhD from Sheffield Hallam University, UK. His research interests have been related to economic analysis of various sporting activities, with special attention on sporting events and media-related issues. Together with Gratton he has published The Economics of Sport Broadcasting (Taylor & Francis, 2007). Harry Arne has also published a number of articles in scientific journals, such as European Sport Management Quarterly, International Journal of Sports Marketing & Sponsorship and Journal of Media Economics, among others. He has also published several book chapters.

Bob Stewart teaches sports studies in the School of Sport and Exercise Science at Victoria University, Melbourne, Australia. He is an Associate Professor of Sport Policy and Regulation, and has a special interest in sport ideology and its role in sustaining the values, myths and beliefs that drive sport’s social development. Bob has written extensively on regulatory regimes and cartel practices in Australia’s professional sport leagues, and is currently researching the regulation of drug use in sport, and how these regulations shape player and athlete behaviour. Bob is also undertaking research into the exercise industry, and has recently completed a study on ‘body work’ in gyms, where he examined the ways in which gym participants use their experiences to accumulate stocks of personal capital and social power.

Tim Ströbel, Dr, is Assistant Professor at the Department of Services Management at the University of Bayreuth, Germany. He teaches sport management, sport marketing and services management. His research focuses on several aspects of brand management, on value creation of organizations and on sport management in general. Especially, his dissertation deals with the measurement of brand equity in sports. Within this framework he made several conference contributions (for example, for the European Association for Sport Management [EASM], Sport Management Society of Australia and New Zealand [SMAANZ] or International Association of Sport Economists [IASE]). Furthermore, he is a member of EASM and board member of the Sport, Business & Law alumni association at the University of Bayreuth.

Jasper Truyens is working as a PhD student at the department of Sport Policy and Management at the Vrije Universiteit Brussel. He graduated as Master in Sociology in 2006 and successfully attained the postgraduate diploma in sport management (2007). His doctoral thesis (2008–11) is about the measurement of competitiveness in elite sport policies at a sport specific level. As a junior researcher he is developing new perspectives within the SPLISS consortium group on the measurement and comparison of elite development systems.

Douglas Michele Turco, PhD, has been professor and Associate Dean of Academic Affairs in the College of Global Studies at Arcadia University since 2012. An award-winning professor, Douglas teaches sport economics, sport tourism, globalization of sport, and research methods. He is also a visiting professor at the Rajiv Gandhi Indian Institute of Management, IMC FH-Krems (Austria), Romanian American University and National Taiwan Sport University. He has authored over 40 articles in Sport Marketing Quarterly, International Journal of Sport Management, Journal of Travel Research, Journal of Sport and Tourism and others, and has written several books. His recent research involves the 2011 Women’s Tennis Association Championships, the 2010 Delhi Commonwealth Games, the 2010 FIFA World Cup, the US Open Golf Championship and the Cricket World Cup.

Geoff Walters is a Lecturer in Management at Birkbeck, University of London and a director of the Birkbeck Sport Business Centre. He graduated from Lancaster University Management School and the University of Manchester before completing a PhD at Birkbeck on corporate governance in the football industry and the relevance of stakeholder theory. He has since published numerous articles and book chapters on governance, regulation, and corporate responsibility in the sport industry. In 2010 he was funded by UEFA through the Universities Research Grant Programme to undertake research on corporate social responsibility (CSR) in European football and more recently has been involved with the development of the Voluntary Code of Good Governance for the Sport and Recreation Sector, an initiative led by the Sport and Recreation Alliance in the UK in 2011.

Mathieu Winand is Lecturer in Sport Management in the School of Sport at the University of Stirling (Scotland, UK). He is also involved as associate researcher in the Olympic Chair Henri de Baillet Latour and Jacques Rogge in Management of Sport Organizations from the Université Catholique de Louvain in Belgium. Dr Winand’s expertise is in the area of organizational performance of sport governing bodies, organizational change, innovation of non-profit sport organizations and in the development of mixed-method designs, particularly Qualitative Comparative Analysis.

Herbert Woratschek, Dr, is Professor and Dean of the Faculty of Law, Business and Economics as well as Head of the Department of Services Management at the University of Bayreuth, Germany. He is also Board Member of the University’s Sports Institute and responsible for the Sport Management programmes at the University of Bayreuth. His research focuses on the measurement and management of the service profit-chain and on sport fan behaviour. In these fields he published numerous academic articles (for example, in Journal of Service Research, European Journal for Sport Management, Journal of Relationship Marketing, Australasian Marketing Journal) and made several conference contributions. Herbert is Vice-President of European Association of Sport Management (EASM) and member of the Editorial Board of European Sport Management Quarterly, International Journal of Sport Finance, International Journal of Sports Marketing and Sponsorship and Marketing ZFP.

Thierry Zintz is Dean of the Faculty of Sport Sciences at the Université catholique de Louvain, Louvain-La-Neuve (Belgium). He is Professor of Sport Management and Holder of the Olympic Chair Henri de Baillet Latour and Jacques Rogge in Management of Sport Organizations at the Université catholique de Louvain. His research interests include configurational approaches, strategies and governance of sport organizations. Thierry is also Vice-President of the Belgian Olympic and Interfederal Committee and Director of the Executive Master in Management of Olympic Sport Organizations (MEMOS).