

About the Authors

Thiago Chagas is a Senior Counsel at Climate Focus, a consultancy company specialising in climate change law and policy and the global carbon market. He has worked extensively with public and private international law issues related to climate finance, institutions, and carbon market development. Mr Chagas studied law at Pontificia Universidade Catolica de São Paulo, Brazil, and holds a Master's in International Law from Edinburgh Law School, UK.

Pedro Conceição is Chief Economist and Head of the Strategic Advisory Unit at the Regional Bureau for Africa, United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) in New York, USA. Prior to this post, he was Director of the Office of Development Studies at UNDP. Previously, he was an Assistant Professor at the Technical University of Lisbon, Portugal.

Eleni Dellas is a Researcher with the Department of Environmental Policy Analysis at the Institute for Environmental Studies (IVM), Free University Amsterdam, the Netherlands. Her research interests include the legitimacy and effectiveness of public-private partnerships for sustainable development, the effectiveness of international environmental regimes, and the distributive effects of market-based environmental governance.

Daniel Esty is the Hillhouse Professor of Environmental Law and Policy at Yale University, USA, presently on leave to serve as Commissioner of the Connecticut Department of Energy and Environmental Protection. Professor Esty is the author or editor of eight books, as well as numerous articles on environment and trade, global governance, competitiveness, security, and development issues.

Margaret Flaherty is Chief Operating Officer at the World Business Council for Sustainable Development (WBCSD), based in Geneva, Switzerland. She has been with the WBCSD for 17 years and has been directing a wide range of projects on business and sustainability, covering topics such as reporting, climate and energy, as well as sector-specific issues.

Pieter Glasbergen is Professor of Environmental Studies, Policy, and Management at Utrecht University and the Dutch Open University, the Netherlands. He chairs the Utrecht-Nijmegen Programme on Partnerships. Having widely published on governance for sustainable development, Dr Glasbergen's current research focuses on global partnerships for sustainable development, meta-governance, and the geopolitical reconstitution of public and private responsibilities.

Eric Harkink is a Market Analyst working in the automotive sector. He worked as a researcher at OC&C Strategy Consultants, Twente University, and Tilburg University, the Netherlands. Mr Harkink obtained his MSc degree in International Business from Tilburg University in 2002. His thesis dealt with sustainable development in the oil and gas industry.

John Hontelez is Chief Advocacy Officer at the Forest Stewardship Council. He was Secretary General of the European Environmental Bureau and Chairman of Friends of the Earth International. Mr Hontelez has been an active environmentalist since 1970, both nationally and at the European and global levels, with specific attention to the environmental movement in Central and Eastern Europe.

Maria Ivanova is Assistant Professor of Global Governance at the McCormack Graduate School of Policy and Global Studies at the University of Massachusetts in Boston, USA. She is also Director of the Global Environmental Governance Project at the Yale Center for Environmental Law and Policy. Previously, she held positions at the College of William and Mary, USA, the OECD in Paris, France, and the Swedish Environmental Protection Agency in Stockholm, Sweden.

Marion Jansen leads the Trade and Employment Programme at the International Labour Office. She previously held the position of Counsellor in the WTO's Economic Research and Statistics Division. Dr Jansen holds a PhD in Economics from the Universitat Pompeu Fabra, Spain. Her publications cover a wide range of trade topics, including the interface of trade policy and domestic regulation.

Nick Johnstone is Head of the Empirical Policy Analysis Unit at the OECD Environment Directorate. His research interests include environmental policy instrument choice, environmental policy and technological innovation, and household behaviour with environmental implications.

He is the author of a number of books and chapters, and has published in leading journals in the field. He holds a PhD in Economics from Cambridge University, UK.

Margarita Kalamova is an Economist in the Empirical Policy Analysis Unit at the Environment Directorate of the OECD in Paris, France, focusing on interrelations of technology innovation, investment, and environmental issues. Dr Kalamova used to work as a Research Fellow on topics in International Trade and Public Economics at the Social Science Research Centre in Berlin, Germany. She holds a PhD in Economics from Freie Universität Berlin.

Inge Kaul is an Adjunct Faculty Member at the Hertie School of Governance, Berlin, Germany. Former positions include Director of the Office of Development Studies at the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), New York, USA, and Director of UNDP's Human Development Report Office. She has published widely on the topics of global public goods, financing of international cooperation, and global governance.

Alexander Keck is Counsellor in the WTO's Economic Research and Statistics Division. Dr Keck worked at the German Federal Ministry for the Environment, UNIDO's Office of the Director-General, and the European Parliament. He also holds Master's degrees in Environment/Development and International Economics as well as an MBA in Finance from the Universities of Cambridge, UK, Heidelberg, Germany, and New York, USA.

René Kemp is Professor of Innovation and Sustainable Development at the International Centre of Integrated Assessment and Sustainable Development (ICIS) of Maastricht University, the Netherlands and Professorial Fellow at UNU-MERIT. He wrote a book on environmental policy and technical change and authored many articles on eco-innovation and sustainability transitions.

Wouter Kersten is Research and Innovation Manager at Enviu, a Dutch non-profit organisation that starts up sustainable business companies. He was involved in various projects at Telos and Globus, research institutes at Tilburg University, the Netherlands, and wrote various articles on sustainable innovation and entrepreneurship. He holds two Master's degrees, from the University of Twente, the Netherlands and the University of Greenwich, UK.

Alkuin Kölliker is a Scientific Adviser at the Regulatory Analyses Unit of the Swiss State Secretariat for Economic Affairs. Previously, he was a Research Fellow at the Max Planck Institute for Research on Collective Goods in Bonn and a Research Associate at the University of Bielefeld, Germany. Dr Kölliker holds a degree in Economics from the University of Berne, Switzerland and a PhD in Political Science from the European University Institute in Florence, Italy.

Ludwig Krämer served for more than 30 years at the Directorate-General Environment of the European Commission. At present, he runs environmental law consultancy firm 'Derecho y Medio Ambiente' in Madrid, Spain, and is a Visiting Professor at University College London, UK. Dr Krämer wrote some 20 books and more than 200 articles on EU environmental law.

Duncan Liefferink is a Senior Researcher in Political Science of the Environment at Radboud University Nijmegen, the Netherlands. His main research interests are in European and comparative environmental politics. Dr Liefferink holds a PhD from Wageningen University, the Netherlands, and is, among other things, the author or co-author of several books.

Arthur Mol is Professor of Environmental Policy at Wageningen University, the Netherlands, and Professor of Environmental Policy at Renmin University, China. His main research interests are in social theory and the environment, globalisation, informational governance, greening production and consumption, and environment and development. He has written or edited several books.

Hannah Mowat is completing her MSc in Environment, Science, and Society at University College London, UK. Previous activities include consulting at FERN (Forests and the European Union Resource Network) and campaigning at Friends of the Earth France. Her research interests include the nexus between forests, climate, and justice. She is writing her thesis on justice and feasibility in international and national legal frameworks.

Hans Opschoor is a member of the UN Committee for Development Policy and Emeritus Professor of Environmental Economics at the Free University in Amsterdam and the Institute of Social Studies in The Hague, the Netherlands. Dr Opschoor studied Economics in Rotterdam and holds a PhD from the Free University in Amsterdam, the Netherlands. He specialises in the economics of international sustainable development and climate change. He was a Review Editor for the IPCC.

Saskia Ozinga is Campaigns Coordinator of FERN (an organisation for tracking EU policies, focusing on forests) which she created in 1995. Previously, she worked for Friends of the Earth Netherlands and taught MSc students at Hogeschool Utrecht, the Netherlands in Environmental Science. Ms Ozinga holds MSc degrees in Biology and Health Care from Utrecht University, the Netherlands.

Jan Pieters is retired. Former positions include: Senior Economics Advisor at the Directorate of Strategy and Administration of the Directorate-General for Environment of the Dutch Ministry of Housing, Spatial Planning, and the Environment at The Hague, the Netherlands; Economist at the OECD Environment Directorate in Paris.

Diahanna Post is a Senior Analyst at the US Government Accountability Office (GAO) in the area of International Affairs and Trade. She received her PhD in Political Science from the University of California, Berkeley, USA.

Luc Soete is Professor of International Economics and Director of UNU-MERIT. He is also Director-Dean of the Maastricht Graduate School of Governance of Maastricht University, the Netherlands. He is a member of the Dutch Advisory Board of Science Policy and a member of the Royal Dutch Academy of Sciences.

Gert Spaargaren is a Senior Researcher and Professor of Environmental Policy for Sustainable Lifestyles and Consumption at Wageningen University, the Netherlands. His main research interests and publications are in the field of environmental sociology, sustainable consumption and behaviour, and the globalisation of environmental reform. He has (co-) edited several books.

Björn Stigson has been President of the World Business Council for Sustainable Development since 1995. He worked as a Financial Analyst with the Swedish Kockums Group, was President and CEO of the Swedish Fläkt Group, and Vice-President and a Member of ABB Asea Brown Boveri's Executive Management Group. Mr Stigson has served on several boards and advisory councils.

Charlotte Streck is Director of Climate Focus and a former Senior Counsel with the World Bank in Washington, DC, USA. She is an advisor to numerous governments, private companies, and other organisations on climate law and policy. She has published extensively, serves on several advisory and editorial panels, and is Lead Counsel for Climate Change with the Center for International Sustainable Development Law with McGill University, Canada.

Michael Toffel is an Associate Professor at the Harvard Business School, USA, studying environmental issues in companies' operations and supply chains. His research examines information disclosure strategies and effectiveness of voluntary environmental management standards. His research has appeared in Administrative Science Quarterly, Management Science, Strategic Management Journal, and California Management Review.

Nazli Uludere Aragon is a freelance Economic Researcher, specialising in the economics and policy issues of energy, infrastructure, and natural resources industries. Her research interests include the political economy of climate change, emissions trading, allowance and credit markets, and the economics of renewables, biofuels and non-traditional fossil fuels, and advanced coal and nuclear generation technologies. She has published in several journals.

Joost van Kasteren has been a freelance Science Writer since 1984. He worked as a Science Writer at Delft Technical University, the Netherlands and was Editor of a Dutch technology magazine. Mr Van Kasteren holds a degree in Molecular Science and has written books and articles on food, agriculture, and sustainable development.

Paul van Seters is Professor of Globalisation and Sustainable Development and Director of Globus at Tilburg University, the Netherlands. His research interests include corporate social responsibility, global civil society, and law and communitarianism.

Sietske Veenman is an Assistant Professor in Political Science of the Environment at Radboud University Nijmegen, the Netherlands. She worked as a project coordinator at the Dutch Scientific Council for Government Policy. Dr Veenman holds a PhD from Radboud University, the Netherlands. Her research interests include European and comparative environmental politics, knowledge and policy, policy transfer, and future studies.

Jonathan Verschuuren is a Professor at the Tilburg Law School and the Tilburg Sustainability Center, the Netherlands, and a Visiting Professor at the Australian Centre for Climate and Environmental Law at the University of Sydney and at North West University at Potchefstroom, South Africa. His current research focus is on biodiversity and climate change, with publications that appeared in legal and other academic journals.

Rob Visser was Deputy-Director of the OECD Environment Directorate until he retired in 2010. Previously, he was Head of the Environment, Health, and Safety Division and Principal Administrator in the Chemicals Division, both at the Organisation for Economic Co-operation and Development (OECD). Earlier, he worked at the Dutch Ministry of Health and the Ministry of Housing, Spatial Planning, and the Environment. Rob Visser holds a PhD degree from Leiden University, the Netherlands.

David Vogel is a Professor at the Haas School of Business and at the Department of Political Science at the University of California at Berkeley, USA, and a Visiting Professor at INSEAD (Institut européen d'administration des affaires). He has published extensively on government regulation, trade and environment, and comparative business-government relations. His most recent book is The Politics of Precaution: Regulating Health, Safety, and Environmental Risks in Europe and the United States (2012).

Konrad von Moltke passed away in 2005. He was Adjunct Professor of Environmental Studies at Dartmouth College, UK and a Visiting Professor at the Free University in Amsterdam, the Netherlands. He taught at the State University of New York and published on medieval history, comparative education, and international environmental policy. Dr von Moltke studied Mathematics at Dartmouth College and Medieval History at the Universities of Munich and Göttingen, Germany.

Moritz von Unger is Senior Legal Counsel at consultancy firm Climate Focus. Educated at the universities of Paris IV-Sorbonne in France, Edinburgh in the UK, St Gallen in Switzerland, as well as Freiburg, Hamburg, and Berlin in Germany, he is a lawyer specialising in European and international law. Dr von Unger worked at the European Commission and was a Fellow at Yale Law School, USA and Wissenschaftskolleg Berlin, Germany. He holds a PhD in International Law.

Rifka Weehuizen is Senior Science Officer at the European Science Foundation in Strasbourg, France and Affiliated Researcher at UNU-MERIT, Maastricht University.

Frank Wijen is an Assistant Professor of Strategic Management at Erasmus University, Rotterdam, with research at the interface of sociological and economic theories around environmental governance practices, and is Research Fellow at Globus, Tilburg University, the Netherlands. Dr Wijen worked as a Senior Researcher, a Marketing Manager, and an Entrepreneur. He holds a PhD in Management from Tilburg University and serves on the editorial boards of Academy of Management Review and Organization Studies.

Kees Zoeteman is Professor of Sustainable Development in International Perspective at Tilburg University, the Netherlands. He served as Deputy Director General at the Dutch Ministry of the Environment, chaired the Board of the European Environment Agency, and was a Member of the China Council on Environment and Development. Dr Zoeteman has had a lifelong interest in reconciling economy and nature and has written several books.