

Contributors

Paolo Barbieri is an Associate Professor in Economic Sociology at the University of Trento, Italy. His research interests include welfare states and labor markets in a comparative perspective, as well as networks, social capital and status attainment processes. He currently coordinates the PhD program in Sociology at Trento University. Paolo Barbieri has been a member of various national and international research teams and recently directed projects within the network of excellence EQUALSOC. Address: Department of Sociology and Social Research, University of Trento, Via Verdi 26, 38122 Trento, Italy [e-mail: paolo.barbieri@unitn.it]

Fabrizio Bernardi is a Professor of Sociology at the European University Institute. His main research interests focus on social inequality, the relationship between family and labor market dynamics, and on quantitative methods for longitudinal analysis. Address: Department of Political and Social Sciences, European University Institute, Badia Fiesolana, Via dei Roccettini 9, 50014 San Domenico di Fiesole, Italy [e-mail: fabrizio.bernardi@eui.eu]

Hans-Peter Blossfeld is the Director of the Institute of Longitudinal Studies in Education (Institut für bildungswissenschaftliche Längsschnittstudien, INBIL) at the University of Bamberg and Principal Investigator of the National Educational Panel Study (NEPS) since 2008. Since 2002, he holds the Chair of Sociology I at Bamberg University and since 2003 is the Director of the State Institute for Family Research at Bamberg University (Staatsinstitut für Familienforschung an der Universität Bamberg, ifb). Hans-Peter Blossfeld has published 23 books and over 190 articles on social inequality, youth, family, educational sociology, labor market research, demography, social stratification and mobility, the modern methods of quantitative social research and statistical methods for longitudinal data analysis. He has directed several large-scale international comparative projects on demography, family, work and education, among them the GLOBALIFE project. Currently, he is interested in the flexibilization of work in modern societies, the division of domestic work in the family, partner choice via the internet, and the development of individual competences and educational careers over the life course. Address: Otto-Friedrich-University

Bamberg, P.O. Box 1549, 96045 Bamberg, Germany [e-mail: soziologie1@uni-bamberg.de]

Sandra Buchholz is an Assistant Professor at Bamberg University in Germany. Before, she served as a research scientist in the international comparative projects ‘GLOBALIFE: Life Courses in the Globalization Process’ (2003–05) and ‘*flex*CAREER: Flexibility Forms on the Labor Market’ (2005–07). Her research especially addresses the influence of national institutions and cultures on the structure and development of social inequalities and individual life courses and she published several articles on this topic. Address: Otto-Friedrich-University Bamberg, P.O. Box 1549, 96045 Bamberg, Germany [e-mail: sandra.buchholz@uni-bamberg.de]

Erzsébet Bukodi is currently Research Director of two of the British birth cohort studies: the 1958 birth cohort study, known as the National Child Development Study (NCDS), and the 1970 British Cohort Study (BCS70) at the Institute of Education, University of London. In 2006–07, she was a Max Weber Post-doctoral Fellow at the European University Institute, Florence. Previously, she worked as a senior researcher at the Department of Sociology, Bamberg University, and was head of the Section of Social Stratification at the Department of Social Statistics of the Hungarian Central Statistical Office, Budapest. Her research interests involve educational inequalities, trends in intergenerational and intra-generational mobility, different aspects of life-course analysis and gender differences in the labor market as well as partnership formation and dissolution. Address: Center for Longitudinal Studies, Institute of Education, University of London, 20 Bedford Way, London WC1H 0AL, UK [e-mail: e.bukodi@ioe.ac.uk]

Maurice Gesthuizen is an Assistant Professor in the Department of Sociology, Radboud University Nijmegen. He also worked at the Netherlands Institute for Social Research, the Hague in the research group ‘Labor, Income and Social Security’. His research interests include the causes and consequences of educational inequality, economic vulnerability and its relation with social isolation, the relationship between ethnic diversity and social capital, and job preferences of workers. Address: Department of Sociology, Faculty of Social Sciences, Radboud University Nijmegen, P.O. Box 9104, 6500 HE Nijmegen, Netherlands [e-mail: m.gesthuizen@maw.ru.nl]

Jenifer Hamil-Luker is an Assistant Professor of Sociology at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, USA. Previously, she was a postdoctoral fellow at Duke University Durham, NC, USA, where she studied health implications of diverse pathways through education systems and labor markets. Her research interests concentrate on the analysis of life course processes on social and economic inequalities. Address: Department of Sociology, University of North Carolina at Greensboro, 314 Graham Building, P.O. Box 26170, Greensboro, NC 27402-6170, USA [e-mail: jlhamill@uncg.edu]

Karin Kurz holds a Chair of Sociology at Georg-August-University of Göttingen, Germany. Her research interests include the cross-national comparison of life course transitions, social inequality, education, the family and the labor market. Address: Institut für Soziologie, Sozialwissenschaftliche Fakultät, Platz der Göttinger Sieben 3, 37073 Göttingen, Germany [e-mail: karin.kurz@sowi.uni-goettingen.de]

Mona Larsen is a senior researcher and program co-coordinator of the research program 'Societal and employment-related aspects of health' at SFI, the Danish National Center of Social Research. She holds a PhD in Economics. Her research interests include retirement behavior and health, labor market behavior, equal pay and quantitative studies conducted on survey and/or administrative register data. Address: SFI – The Danish National Centre of Social Research, Herluf Trolles Gade 11, 1052 Copenhagen K, Denmark [e-mail: ml@sfi.dk]

Angela M. O'Rand is Professor of Sociology and Dean of Social Sciences at Duke University, Durham NC, USA. She has published over 80 articles and chapters and three books in the areas of the life course and aging, social stratification and social demography. Her long-term interests have focused on the social organization of the life course and its change in response to economic and historical factors over the 20th century and at the turn of the 21st century. She has examined these changes primarily by using longitudinal data and different dynamic methods for their analysis. One focus of her work has been on the changing work-to-retirement transition in the US context. A second focus has been on the changing educational career in the US. A third more recent focus has been on the long-term impact of childhood conditions on later life statuses across domains including work and health. Address: 102a Allen Building, Box 90029, Duke University, Durham NC 27708-0029, USA [e-mail: aorand@soc.duke.edu]

Jonas Radl is a postdoctoral researcher (Juan de la Cierva Fellow) at the Department of Sociology II (Social Structure) of the Universidad Nacional de Educación a Distancia (UNED) in Madrid. He holds a PhD from the European University Institute in Florence. His research interests focus on life course analysis and social stratification, but also include areas such as social norms, intergenerational transfers and pension reform. Address: UNED, Departamento de Sociología II (Estructura Social), Facultad de Ciencias Políticas y Sociología, Obispo Trejo s/n, 28040 Madrid, Spain [e-mail: jradl@poli.uned.es]

Annika Rinklake is working as a research scientist at the Institute for Family Research at the University of Bamberg. Her research interests focus on labor market processes, division of labor, age and care, as well as life courses. From 2007 until 2009, she was analyzing labor market exits and the late career within the DFG project '*flex*CAREER: Flexibility forms on the labor market'. Address: Staatsinstitut für Familienforschung an der Universität Bamberg, Heinrichsdamm 4, 96047 Bamberg, Germany [e-mail: annika.rinklake@ifb.uni-bamberg.de]

Ellu Saar is a Professor at the Institute for International and Social Studies, Tallinn University, Estonia. She is now coordinating the EU 6th framework project 'Towards a Lifelong Learning Society in Europe: The Contribution of the Education System'. Her research areas are social stratification and mobility, educational inequalities and life course studies. She is a member of the Editorial Board of European Sociological Review and a member of the Steering Committee of European Consortium of Sociological Research. Address: Institute of International and Social Studies, Tallinn University, Uus-Sadama 5-658, Tallinn 10120, Estonia [e-mail: saar@iiss.ee]

Stefani Scherer is an Assistant Professor at Trento University, Italy. Her research interests concentrate on inequality and social stratification processes in international comparative perspective, the analysis of life courses, family and labor market dynamics. She currently directs the ERC funded project 'Families of Inequalities'. Address: Department of Sociology and Social Research, University of Trento, Via Verdi 26, 38122 Trento, Italy [e-mail: stefani.scherer@unitn.it]

Julia Schilling was employed as a research scientist at the State Institute for Family Research at the University of Bamberg from 2008 to 2009. During that time, she worked in the second phase of the DFG project '*flex*CAREER: Flexibility forms on the labor market', dealing with late careers and retirement in Denmark, which is also the focus of her dissertation. In 2009, she joined the research group of the National Educational Panel Study (NEPS). Address: National Educational Panel Study, Otto-Friedrich-Universität Bamberg, 96047 Bamberg, Germany [e-mail: julia.schilling@uni-bamberg.de]

Paul Schmelzer is currently a senior researcher at the Research Institute (IAB) of the Federal Employment Agency. The subject of his work is the preparation, testing and evaluation of data concerning the activation measures of people with disability. From 2005 to 2010, he worked in the international comparative DFG project 'flexCAREER: Flexibility forms on the labor market' at Bamberg University (2005–07) and at Göttingen University (2007–10). His main areas of interest are labor market research, quantitative methods, international comparison and industrial relations. Address: IAB, Regensburger Str. 104, 90478 Nürnberg, Germany [e-mail: paul.schmelzer@iab.de]

Gabriella Sjögren Lindquist is an Assistant Professor of Economics and Deputy Director of the Swedish Institute for Social Research. Her research interests include occupational and social insurance systems, work injuries and personnel economics. Address: Swedish Institute for Social Research, Stockholm University, 10691 Stockholm, Sweden [e-mail: gabriella.lindquist@sofi.su.se]

Kadri Täht currently works as a researcher at the Institute of International and Social Studies at Tallinn University in Estonia. Her research interests involve educational inequality, labor market, relationships between work and family dynamics, and cross-national comparative research. Address: Institute of International and Social Studies, Tallinn University, Uus-Sadama 5-665, Tallinn 10120, Estonia [e-mail: kadri@iiss.ee]

Marge Unt is a senior researcher at the Institute of International and Social Studies, Tallinn University, Estonia. Her research interests lie in social stratification, labor markets, occupations and careers in comparative perspective, and methods of data analysis. She has published articles about transition from school to work, self-employment and job mobility in European Societies, International Sociology, International Journal of Comparative Sociology, Europe-Asia Studies, among other journals. Address: Institute of International and Social Studies, Tallinn University, Uus-Sadama 5-662, Tallinn, 10120, Estonia [e-mail: marge.unt@iiss.ee]

Alberto Veira-Ramos is an Assistant Professor of Population Theory and Demographic Analysis Techniques at the Department of Sociology of the Carlos III University of Madrid, Spain. He obtained his Master of Sciences in Sociology at the University of Wisconsin-Madison (USA) and his PhD at the UNED (Spain). His main field of research is the demography of the labor market in a comparative perspective, with focus on early retirement, female labor supply and the patterns of participation of immigrant workers in the labor market. Address: Department of Sociology, Carlos III University of Madrid, C/Madrid 126, 28903 Getafe, Madrid, Spain [e-mail: alberto.veira@uc3m.es]

Maarten H.J. Wolbers is an Associate Professor in the Department of Sociology, Radboud University Nijmegen. He also worked at the Research Centre for Education and the Labor Market, Maastricht University and the Department of Social Research Methodology, VU University Amsterdam. His research interests include the sociology of education, work and labor markets. Address: Department of Sociology, Faculty of Social Sciences, Radboud University Nijmegen, P.O. Box 9104, 6500 HE Nijmegen, Netherlands [e-mail: m.wolbers@maw.ru.nl]